Who said that Friday the Thirteenth was a jinx day? Here's Mrs. Mildred DeSimone Downey, 20, and a brand new argument to prove it's a lucky day, regardless of the calendar. The tiny miss in Mrs. Downey's arms squalled out a reproof to the superstitious world at 1:22 this morning. Mother thinks it's a fine birthday. See that smile?

CODMAN HEAD TO BE FREED AUG. 31

BULLETIN

Judge Williams in Superior Court this afternoon refused to immediately release William J. Driscoll, president of the Codman Hill Construction Company, whom he jailed July 1 for contempt, but announced he would relase him August 31.

Hinting at a "plot" to deny him his rights, Mayor Mansfield, already battling the Finance Commission in a superior court action, started another offensive today — this time in the supreme court.

The mayor asked the supreme court for a writ of mandamus to force the commission to let him testify further, present witnesses of his own choosing and cross-examine all witnesses.

Mansfield stated he was shut off by the members of the Finance Commission, who acted suddenly and without any deliberation among themselves "except in so far as they might have, prior to that time, conspired to deny the rights of your petitioner."

Earlier this week in Superior court, equity division, the mayor had asked in the form of an injunction virtually the same relief that he now asks of the Supreme court.

The injunction case comes up for

U. S. Warship Guards 4000; Shanghai Afire

Shanghai, Aug. 13 (AP)—Japanese naval guns and Chinese and Japanese land batteries pumped hundreds of shells into their opposing forces in open Shanghai warfare tonight.

An artillery duel along the northern fringe of the city set fire to scores of buildings in the Chinese Kiangwan and Chapei areas. A strong wind threatened a holocaust like that of 1932.

A Japanese warship bombarded the newly-built million and a half dollar Jukong wharf, on the left bank of the Whangpoo river, midway between Shanghai and Woosung.

The United States Asiatic squadron steamed into action to protect the 4000 American residents of the Shanghai area.

Unconfirmed reports said Japanese warships were shelling the Woosung forts, which guard the Whangpoo entrance to Shanghai by water. Two Chinese divisions were reported under orders to take up positions at Woosung. This is 10 miles from Shanghai proper.

Two huge fires broke out in the vicinity of the bombarded wharf. The flames lit up Shanghai's eastern districts.

It was impossible to approach the area through military lines, but it was believed the wharf was burning and that the second fire was at godowns in the near vicinity.

When the first gun boomed in the naval bombardment, concentra-

SENATE GROUP O. K'S BLACK

HIS CHOICE LEGAL SAYS PRESIDENT

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—A Senate Judiciary subcommittee swiftly approved today the nomination of Senator Black (D.) Alabama to the Supreme Court.

It acted only minutes after President Roosevelt told a press conference Attorney General Cummings had informed him that it was perfectly legal and Constitutional to appoint Black to the Supreme Court.

The judiciary sub-committee of six members voted to report Black's nomination favorably, after rejecting a move by Senator Austin (R.-Vt.), to hold up action pending study of legal questions involved.

All members of the sub-committee except Austin voted for approval of the nomination and rejection of the New Englander's proposal for delay.

QUESTIONS RAISED

Black's eligibility had been questioned by some Senators in view of the fact he voted for the Supreme Court retirement bill permitting justices to leave the bench at full pay.

They have held that this increased the emoluments of the office, and the Constitution holds a Senator can not accept a post which had been increased in pay during the time he was serving in the Senate.

The President said Cummings' opinion had been given to him informally and verbally.

FEW SPECTATORS

Only a dozen spectators were in the room when the judiciary subcommittee meeting opened with Chairman Neely (D.) of West Virginia presiding.

Neely said he had received half

Cardinal Hayes 'Much Improved'

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Patrick Cardinal Hayes was reported "much improved" today at St. Vincent Hospital, where he became a patient last night after suffering an attack of indigestion Tuesday at his summer home near Monticello, N. Y.

There is no cause for alarm, the hospital said, adding the 69-year-old prelate probably would remain a few more days for observation before returning upstate.

Downtown Traffic Signals Darkened

Uniformed policemen were rushed to important downtown intersections to direct the rush of traffic this morning when a contact switch blew out, darkening traffic signals for 45 minutes.

The lights were restored to working order at 9:30 a. m., after the switch on a panel board in the basement of Boston City Hall had been repaired.

U. S. WARNS BRITAIN ON PALESTINE

By ROBERT G. NIXON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 13—The United States has informed Great Britain it will insist upon preservation of the rights of American Jews in the Holy Land.

This was revealed today in disclosure of an exchange of notes between American Ambassador Robert Bingham and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

The notes, discussing Britain's proposal to terminte the Palestine mandate by dividing it into three parts, were exchanged after announcement of the British intention.

As a result, Britain has given assurance the United States will be kept informed of any steps taken that may involve rights of American Jews who have taken up residence in the Jewish national homeland.

INVOLVED IN SIX ARTICLES

The notes revealed a divergent point of view between the United States and Britain on rights of the respective governments in disposition of the mandate, set up after the Allied victory in the World War. Palestine had been under Turkish control. Britain administered the mandate.

Eden informed the State Department that American rights are involved only in six articles of the mandate and not in changing the mandate as a whole.

Four Quins Out, Crowd In 'Riot'

Cecile Still Ailing, Others Are Well

Callander Ont., Aug. 13 (INS)—A near-riot scene was staged today by thousands of tourists when four of the five Dionne quintuplets made their first public appearance in several days.

The crowd—many had waited for days to see the famous children—milled about the nursery and fought good-naturedly for vantage points near the screens that separate the quins from visitors.

When Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe left the nursery after his regular visit to the children he was nearly overwhelmed by the throng.

Hot dog stands and souvenir stores about the quintuplets' home here were rushed as they had seldom been before.

The quintuplets did not venture into the playground itself today, but appeared on a veranda overlooking it. The playground was rain-sodden.

Because of the crowds, the children were to make another public appearance this afternoon.

Cecile, only one of the children still ill, was reported "coming along nicely" by Dr. Dafoe, who said she should be able to join her sisters by Monday.

Dr. Dafoe was more amused than annoyed at today's demonstration.

WIND DELAYS SOVIET PLANE

Seattle, Aug. 13 (AP)—The Army Signal Corps here reported at 8:39 a. m. (12:39 p. m. E. D. T.) that the Russian transpolar plane was bucking terrific headwinds in its flight toward Fairbanks, Alaska, and that it could not reach that refueling point earlier than 4 p. m. (8 p. m. E. D. T.)

The U. S. Army Signal Corps radio station at Fairbanks intercepted a message to a Russian radio station saying the ship passed over the Pole at 12:45 a. m. Fairbanks time (5:45 a. m. E. D. T.), today.

Flying at an altitude of 6000 meters, the plane encountered 35-below-zero temperature in the vicinity of the Pole, said messages intercepted by the Signal Corps at Nome.

$20,000 DEATH PLOT LINKED TO MURDER

By JAMES J. DELANEY

(Copyright, 1937, by the Boston Evening American)

Providence, Aug. 13—As the inquest into the murder of Dr. George W. Webster, East Side society physician, was concluded today, it was disclosed here that Deputy City Collector Philip E. Cunningham had been threatened with Dr. Webster's fate if he did not pay $20,000 in cash to the plotters.

Cunningham told the Boston Evening American that he received a typewritten letter at his offices in City Hall on Monday, July 19, just three days after Dr. Webster had been shot to death in the hallway of his home.

"The letter was an ordinary white note paper," said Cunningham. "What the exact words were I cannot say, but I was told that if I did not place $20,000 in a spot opposite the Homeopathic Hospital, both myself and my 12-year-old son would die."

The hospital mentioned, Cunningham pointed out, was the same one in whiuh Dr. Webster had been chief obstetrician and was the same hospital in which the doctor died shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning of July 16.

Police, notified by Cunningham at the time, immediately placed night-and-day guards about the man's home, as well as the collector's offices in City Hall.

Postal inspectors were called in because the letter had passed through the United Staes mails.

SERIES OF THREATS

Since the letter was received from Cunningham, it was also learned by the Boston Evening American that a series of similar threat letters had also been received by at least another dozen persons in Providence.

Police, concerned at the possible or probable connection between these threats and the solution of the mysterious Webster case, steadfastly declined to even admit existence of the missives.

Some of the letters are said to have promised death by pistol or shotgun; some of them threatened bombings; all of them threatened death by violence of some sort if

Another New York Girl, 4, Strangled

New York, Aug. 13 (INS)—Strangled and attacked, the body of four-year-old Joan Kuleba was found in a vacant bungalow at suburban New Dorp, Staten Island, today.

A police search, instigated by Mrs. Grace Lesandi, the little girl's aunt, led to the discovery.

The lifeless little form was only partially clothed when found. There was no immediate clue to her killer.

Palestine Plan Seen as Reward To Rebel Arabs

Rabbi Meier Berlin, president of the World Mizrachi, the orthodox wing of the Zionist movement, gives the reasons for his opposition to the British plan to partition Palestine in the following article, the last of a series written exclusively for Universal Service.

By RABBI MEIER BERLIN
(President of the Mizrachi Organization)

World copyright, 1937, by Universal Service. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 31—The operation which His Majesty's government is prepared to perform in accordance with the recommendations of the Royal Commission for Palestine is neither necessary nor useful.

In the history of people and countries there are cases where certain land areas were partitioned in order to bring about participation by the affected zones. Warfare was to be followed by tranquility.

In our time, that was the case with Alsace-Lorraine, with the partition of Poland and the Italian Tyrol. In such cases when the status quo gives way to the new the amendment transfers sovereignty and time takes care of the rest.

The spirit of peace gains ascendancy over this period of dissatisfaction and unrest.

But this is not the case with the proposals of the commission to partition Palestine into three parts—to give to the Jewish people only a small part of the land that belongs to them and deprive them of the greater part of their historic heritage.

Had the Royal Commission somehow succeeded in finding and explaining to the world an historic or moral reason for bestowing upon the Arabs the greatest part of of western Palestine, leaving out of consideration the territory east of the Jordan and assigning to the proposed Jewish state a small part thereof, there might have been some reason to hope that the surgical operation would have the merit of expediency or usefulness.

Should the right of occupation and cultivation be taken as the yardstick of judgment, the arbitrary decision of the commission in awarding the greater part of the country to the Arabs won't lie.

One case in point will suffice. The area of Beisan, for instance, has been under Arab ownership since the land was awarded them by the British high commissioner, Sir Herbet Samuel.

The land lay idle and of no use whatever to its nominal owners or to the people of the country as a whole. The Jews weren't allowed to make use of it.

As soon, however, as the Jewish people gained a foothold in the Beisan region new lands and activities sprang up through the advantage of cultivation and to the beneficience of the country as a whole.

SAME IN HOLY CITY

Let us now consider another aspect of the commission's proposals: The question of Jerusalem.

By what right and under what pretext will they be able to justify the exclusion of Jerusalem when the entire world knows not only the place of Jerusalem in history and in the hearts of Jews, but the great efforts invested by the Jews recently when they converted the Holy City from a backward povincial town into a beautiful metropolis? A similar question may be asked about other parts of Palestine.

It's clear that the plan to partition Palestine hasn't been based on the principles of justice, history or the interest of the country so affected.

Viewed from our angle, this plan is no more or no less than a reward given to the Arabs for their revolt they had raised against the mandate regime.

In 1922, the reward for these murders and incendiarism was separation of the territory east of the Jordan.

The bloodshed, murder and incendiarism committed by the Arabs for the period of the six months of 1936 has now been rewarded by conferring on them the greater part of the territories west of the Jordan too.

This partition serves the purposes of neither justice nor expediency. So one may indeed ask: what is the advantage in resorting to this "surgical operation?" Haven't we the right to tell the learned physicians to desist?

Delegates Guarded After Threats in Zurich

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 13 (AP)—Zurich police took added precautions to guard delegates to the Zionist Congress today after a number of them were molested on the streets by young Swiss "Frontists," members of a nationalist organization.

Rabbi Wolf Gold, formerly of New York and now a resident of Palestine and president of the World Mizrachi Orthodox Jewish Organization, was among the delegates annoyed Wednesday night. His hat was torn off by a group of youths.

A British delegate was beaten.

A proposal to settle 200,000 Jews in Palestine within the next three years, involving an investment of about $175,000,000, was laid before the World Zionist Congress today.

The proposal was made by Eleizer Kaplal, treasurer of the Zionist executive committee, who said American Jewry was expected to contribute $2,000,000 to the Zionist movement and Palestine fund in the fiscal year.

The immigration project was supported by Isaac Vilkansky, director of the cultural experimental station, who said the project was neither fantastic nor "far-fetched," since development on a similar scale took place from 1932 to 1935, when 150,000 Jewish immigrants went to Palestine, bringing their own capital of approximately $150,000,000.

Nazis 'Relieve' 'Hanfy's' Cousin

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP)—Professor Eberhard Hanfstaengl, director of the Berlin National Gallery, who, it was rumored, was lukewarm toward the new Nazi purge of art, was sent on an "indefinite vacation" today.

The professor is a cousin of Ernst Hanfstaengl, the Harvard graduate who until recently was foreign press chief of the Nazi party—but is now, by preference, in London.

U. S. DEMANDS RIGHTS IN PALESTINE

States government will, therefore, not be required to any change in the Palestine mandate unless the specific rights in question are thereby affected," Eden declared.

". . . But, should any such changes affect any of the United States rights laid down in Articles 2 and 6 of the convention referred to above, His Majesty's government will immediately inform the United States government and seek their consent thereto."

U. S. FIRM IN STAND

In a vigorous reply, Ambassador Bingham told Eden that United States rights in any disposition or change of the mandate embrace the mandate as a whole and not merely the special articles dealing with rights of American Jews in Palestine.

The position of the United States is that it was a party to the allied victory and a participant in the setting up of the Palestine mandate as well as disposition of the colonies relinquished by Germany at Versailles.

This position was enunciated in 1921 when formation of the mandate was being discussed. It stated:

"With respect to mandated territories other than those which were formerly possessions of Germany, while it is true that the United States did not declare war against Turkey, still the opportunity of the allied powers to secure the allocation of mandates and the administration of territories formerly under Turkish rule was made possibe only through the victory over Germany, and the United States assumes that, by reason of its relation to that victory and of the fundamental principles recognized by the British government as applicable to the administration of mandated territories, there would be no disposition in relation to any of these territories to discriminate against the United States or to refuse to safeguard equality of commercial opportunity."

Protest Here Spurs U. S. Warning

It was the voice of aroused Bostonians, raised in protest against the partition of Palestine, that brought about the disclosure today that Secretary of State Hull had secretly warned Great Britain against pushing its proposal.

That protest meeting, held in Faneuil Hall on August 1, under the auspices of William Randolph Hearst's Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, resulted in passage of a resolution citing freedom-loving Boston's opposition to splitting Palestine into Jewish, Arabian and British states.

United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., honor guest of that meeting, carried the resolution to Washington and laid it before Secretary Hull.

Today followed the welcome news that the Secretary had demanded respect of America's right to a voice in any change in the Palestine mandate and assurance that this right would be "safeguarded."

AS IN IRAQ AND SYRIA

Bingham informed Eden this policy was adhered to in the instances of the Iraq and Syrian mandates.

"The views . . . are, of course, fully applicable to the proposed termination of the Palestine mandate," Bengham asserted.

He explained United States interest "is based exclusively on its obligation and purpose to provide for the protection of American interests in Palestine on a basis of equality with those of other governments and their nationals." Bingham added:

"I am instructed to request that these proposals may be communicated to my government in ample time to enable it to determine what, if any, observations it may desire to make with a view to the preservation of American rights in Palestine."

LISTS U. S. RIGHTS

The rights, set forth in articles 2 and 6, guarantee:

1—The United States and its nationals shall have and enjoy all the rights and benefits secured under the terms of the mandate to members of the League of Nations.

2—Vested American property rights in the mandated territory shall be respected and in no way impaired.

3—Subject to the provisions of any local laws for the maintenance of public order and public morals, the nationals of the United States will be permitted freely to establish and maintain educational, philanthropic and religious institutions in the mandated territory, to receive voluntary applicants and to teach in the English language.

MUST GET U. S. SANCTION

4—Nothing contained in the present convention shall be affected by any modification which may be made to in the terms of the mandate as recited above, unless such modification shall have been assented to by the United States.

In its proposal, Britain would divide Palestine into three parts—one, the fertile coast country to be inhabited exclusively by Jews, the back country and that portion adjoining Trans-Jordania to be given to the Arabs, and the Bethlehem and Nazareth area, with a corridor to the sea at Jaffa, to be under British control.

MOVE TO BLAST WAGE BILL OUT OF COMMITTEE

Washington, Aug. 13 (INS)—The extraordinary procedure of seeking to blast the wage-hours bill from the House rules committee by petition was invoked today by Chairman Mary T. Norton (D.), of New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee.

She introduced a resolution to discharge the rules committee from consideration of the bill.

Next Friday, after a lapse of seven legislative days, she will formally file the petition with the Speaker and ask members to sign it.

The wage-hours bill, however, was believed doomed for the present session. Mrs. Norton estimated it would take a month to complete the procedure necessary to bring the bill to the House floor.

PRESIDENT WAITS WORD

An added week or two would probably be necessary for passage, and a conference agreement with the Senate. It appeared doubtful that leaders would keep Congress in session for a month to six weeks.

President Roosevelt at his press conference said he had heard nothing new from capitol hill about the wage-hours bill. He indicated he was still awaiting word as to what is planned in connection with the bill.

Mrs. Norton conceded that the wage-hours bill was securely blocked in the House Rules committee. Although the measure was reported favorably by the House Labor committee by a 17 to 2 vote, leaders are unable to obtain a special rule for its consideration from the rules committee.

SENATORS PLAN FIGHT

Southern Democratic members of the committee, it was disclosed, had bound themselves to make a last ditch fight against the bill by blocking it in the committee.

The discharge rule procedure invoked by Mrs. Norton has been used in the past when backers of measures, such as the soldiers' bonus, sought passage of legislation over objection of party leaders.

Leaders of the House, however, are backing the wage-hours bill, passage of which President Roosevelt requested. A revolt by the Rules committee—regarded as a party policy committee—is almost unprecedented.

Roosevelt Set To Call 'Quits' In Court Fight

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 13—President Roosevelt indicated today that he is willing to call it "quits" in his six months' battle to effect changes in the United States Supreme Court.

Although defeated in his initial effort to reorganize the court and add up to six new justices to the bench, the President, nevertheless, feels that with the addition of new blood—in the person of Senator Hugo L. Black, Alabama liberal—he has in large measure accomplished what he originaly set out to do. And for that reason he will not sponsor or press a constitutional amendment at this time which would curb the court's powers or further increase its personnel.

A dozen such amendments are now slumbering in Congress, most of them introduced during the long six months' battle over the original court plan. Some of them were sponsored by the President's supporters, others by those who were violently opposed to his initial plan.

But when he was asked at his regular press conference today whether it was his intention to press for a constitutional amendment to further carry out his ideas of court reform, Mr. Roosevelt's reply was a blunt:

"No."

By that single word, and the manner of its utterance, Mr. Roosevelt indicated that so far as the immediate future is concerned the great court fight is ended.

It is a fight that has proven costly to Mr. Roosevelt's prestige and to the solidarity of his party. Whether it may be revived again at some future date depends upon events and circumstances which cannot at this time be foreseen. But for the time being, there was every indication that it is over.

If the sponsors of the constitutional amendments want to make a fight for them, that is their business. Mr. Roosevelt will look upon such efforts with a sympathetic eye—depending upon the nature of the amendments—but he is leading no fight for any of them at this time.

Most of the amendments now hanging fire in committee pigeonholes have been sponsored by those who were most bitterly opposed to the original court plan. They were thrown into the turbulent battle by his opponents, with the argument that if the court was to be tampered with, it should be done only by the amendment route. The President feels the sponsors should do the pushing now, if any pushing is to be done.

SENATE GROUP OKAYS BLACK

a dozen telegrams on the nomination, all but one of which were opposed. One of them, he said, asked whether the Senate or John L. Lewis, CIO leader, was confirming the appointment.

Neely said, however, that no one had asked for a hearing, and he believed none was necessary.

He expressed the opinion that members of the committee knew Black's record completely.

Senators Logan (D.) of Kentucky and McGill (D.) of Kansas had concurred in Neely's view before the hearing opened.

Administration senators had lined up to reject with little ceremony the protests of a small but vigorous group against confirmation.

The only question, Black's supporters said, was whether the judiciary committee could avoid hearings on his qualifications, demanded by a few members.

All the Senate criticism to President's Roosevelt's surprise selection came from opponents of the original court reorganization bill. Less than half a dozen senators had come out publicly against confirmation.

Most of the expressed opposition was from Republicans—notably Senators Austin of Vermont, Bridges of New Hampshire and Vandenberg of Michigan.

Bridges said he believed Black does not have the "judicial temperament necessary for a Supreme Court justice." The others did not give their reasons.

On the Democratic side Senator King of Utah, a judiciary committee member, objected to the choice.

More significant than the outspoken criticism—from the standpoint of votes—was the silence of some of Black's Democratic colleagues, particularly those from his own "deep South." Most of the Southern Senators opposed the wage and hour bill, which he sponsored.

CONSTITUTION DAY PRAISED

High church dignitaries, including Cardinal O'Connell, today gave high praise to the National Constitution Day committee which is planning the patriotic meeting on Boston Common, September 17, the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

In accepting appointment as a member of the honorary committee, the Cardinal, in a letter to Martin Van Buren Cass, vice-chairman of the committee, said:

"I am happy to assist in every way possible with members of the National Constitution Day in making the Constitution Day celebration to be held on Boston Common September 17 a glorious and patriotic event.

"The committee members have my sincerest and best wishes in this undertaking and I know that citizens of this Commonwealth will do their utmost to make the event a memorable one.

CHURCHES TO AID

"I have instructed that your committee be furnished with a complete list of the names of churches and pastors in the archdiocese who will be glad to cooperate and lend assistance."

Rev. Leroy Coons, D. D., superintendent of the Universalist Churches in Massachusetts, advised the committee that Universalists throughout the state will cooperate one hundred per cent in honoring the memories of those who made possible the establishment and preservation of our liberty.

"September 17 has a dual significance for the citizens of Massachusetts," said Dr. Coons.

"For it was in the Bay State that a group of God-fearing settlers founded Boston as a refuge for those who sought to worship God as their consciences dictated.

"I trust that every religious body in Massachusetts will cooperate and make the 150th observance one to be long remembered."

PLAN BIG PARADE

At a meeting held at the State House of representatives of the National Constitution Day committee and members of Governor Hurley's Susquicentennial Celebration Commission, plans were discussed for a gigantic military and civic parade.

Governor Hurley was designated as honorary chairman, President of the Senate Samuel Wragg was elected vice-chairman and Attorney Max Kabatznick of Boston was elected executive secretary.

Army and Navy units, the National Guard and military, civic and fraternal organizations will be invited to participate in the parade through Boston streets.

Request that public and parochial schools throughout the state close at noon Constitution Day to permit school children to view the parade will be made by the Constitution Day committee.

Dr. Clinton, Noted Botanist, 70, Dies

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 13 (AP)—Dr. George Perkins Clinton, 70, one of the country's outstanding botanists and until recently attached to the Connecticut agricultural experiment station, died today at his home here.

In 1900 Dr. Clinton made a trip by bicycle from Illinois to Massachusetts to visit Dr. F. V. Farlow, distinguished Harvard botanist.

BLOND ONE-YEAR-OLD ROXBURY BOY SELECTED AS 'PERFECT BABY'

Amazes Judges in Health Contest in Which 50 Infants Are Competitors

"Aw, shucks, don't interview me."

1—Charles Foster Farrell, one-year-old "Perfect Baby," so adjudged at Whittier Health Unit in Roxbury, where a contest was held in which more than 50 babies were entered. Charles' perfect health amazed doctors, nurses and superintendent who judged the entrants.

"Guess I'll put on the feed bag."

2—Charles consumes about two quarts of milk daily, besides orange juice, cereal, toast, spinach, carrots, baked potato, chops. He weighs 22 pounds and has twelve teeth, sleeps regularly, never ill and has a sunshiny disposition, but doesn't like women.

Boston Evening American Photos

"All right, then, I'll pose."

Mother, 3 Children Gas Victims Parted

Lawrence, August 13—Mrs. Isabelle Di Blas, 32-year-old divorced mother, was separated in death today from the three young children who had preceded her to a tomb.

The body of Mrs. Di Blas was buried in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery after a solemn high mass of requiem in Holy Trinity Church, attended only by relatives and a few close friends.

The bodies of the children, Raymond, nine; Mary, 10, and Genevieve, 13, were removed from a tomb in St. Mary's Cemetery and buried in a lot purchased by their father, Santis Di Blas. Services were held at the graves.

The children had been found dead, their mother dying, in a gas-filled apartment in Willow street, Monday morning.

PERFECT 1 YEAR BABY WEIGHS 22 POUNDS

"The perfect baby"—that is the title bestowed upon chubby, blue-eyed, blond Charles Foster Farrell, one year old, of 860 Columbus avenue, Roxbury.

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farrell, he was entered with more than 50 other babies between the ages of one and two in a contest conducted by the Whittier Street Health Unit in Roxbury.

His perfect health amazed the doctors, nurses and superintendent of the Unit, who acted as judges.

"It was the happiest moment of my life when Charles was chosen as the perfect baby," beamed Mrs. Farrell, the child's mother.

"I have never had to worry about his health. He has never been ill, eats and sleeps regularly and has a very sunny disposition," she added proudly.

The prize baby consumes almost two quarts of milk a day. A normal daily menu for him consists of orange juice, cereal, toast and milk in the morning; spinach, carrots, baked potatoes and milk for lunch, and chops, usually lamb, and milk for dinner.

He weighs 22 pounds and has 12 teeth—an ideal rating for his age, according to doctors. He dislikes the fair sex intensely, except his mother, of course, and so far is wholly impervious to their wiles.

One of the words which he pronounces clearly is "ice," and for this reason he is not very popular with icemen whom he beckons from his window. Many an iceman has answered his call only to discover that it was a "false alarm."

His father is employed in a Watertown rubber company.

Atty. Qua's Yacht Adrift Off Maine

Portland, Me., Aug. 13—With her cabin stove in, the 40-foot cabin cruiser of Attorney Francis M. Qua of Lowell, Mass., was found drifting today in Casco Bay, 40 miles from the Qua summer home at Drake's Island, off Wells Beach.

At Lowell offices of the lawyer, a brother of Judge Stanley E. Qua of Massachusetts Supreme Court, it was said the cruiser was believed to have broken away during the night and to have been carried to Casco Bay by wind and currents.

Police believe, however, that the boat may have been stolen and had crashed into another craft.

Captain Earl Stockbridge of the Steamer McQuo, the Casco Bay line, sighted the drifting cruiser on the first trip to Great Diamond Island today.

FIRST FRIDAY 13 BABY ARRIVES AT 4:22 A. M.

Meet little Miss Downey — Boston's first Friday the Thirteenth baby — 7½ pounds and just as healthy and happy as a new-born could be.

She sounded off at exactly 4:22 a. m. at her home in Heath street, Roxbury.

Mother, Mrs. Mildred de Simone Downey, only 20 years old, is the wife of proud young John Downey. He's 22 and this makes the second little girl in the family. The other one is Irene, now 16 months old.

The young mother thinks that all this superstition about Friday the Thirteenth being a jinx day is "so much bosh."

Smiling as she held her new daughter in her arms, she told a newspaper photographer:

"The calendar can say it's any day in the week and any date of the month, but it's my lucky day. Wouldn't you say so?"

Still a bit doubtful of how people are supposed to take omens, auguries and other things like Friday the Thirteenth superstitions the newsman suggested:

"But how about the rest of your family? Won't they be worried?"

Just then the male member of the Downeys piped up.

"Speaking for Irene and myself, the answer is NO! Anything that the missus says is right with us. Take your jinx and hitch him outside.

"This is our lucky day!"

Good fortune came immediately as Barbara Stanwyck, Hollywood star, whose picture, "Stella Dallas," opened here today at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters, wired congratulations and sent a bassinet to the child, who will be given the name of Barbara in honor of her benefactress.

WIND Saves Trio IN BOAT

4TH SWIMS FOR HELP

Provincetown, Aug. 13—Near tragedy in a violent sea for two girl art students and their young men companions was disclosed here early today—the girls and one youth in the rôle of bedraggled castaways and the other youth exhausted after a two-mile "rescue swim."

The party of four, Helen Wires, 18, of Whiting road, Wellesley Hills; Dorothy Nelson, 19, of Chicago; Rowland Lyon, 33, Washington artist, and Gregg Johnson, 25, of Herkimer, N. Y., a vacationist, revealed that they had been caught aboard a 16-foot sailboat three miles off here in a 30-mile wind and choppy seas.

First reports of their plight came from Johnson, who dived overboard in the black of night and struck out for shore to summon help for the small craft they expected might be swamped.

He was still swimming, but near exhaustion, when he was picked up by two college students in the 28-foot sloop Ahto. They were Albert Hamelin of Westport, Ct., a Yale man, and Al Humphreys of Moristown, N. J., a Princeton senior.

CALL COAST GUARD

The rescue sloop, incidentally, was the craft made famous a few years ago when Otto Walter, American sportsman, crossed the Atlantic three times with her.

Hamelin and Humphreys, after giving Johnson aid, alarmed the Coast Guard and crews from Wood End, Highland and Race Point stations, together with a number of other private craft started the search for the two girls and the other man.

In the black of the night, the search went on for hours and hope for the three had been practically abandoned by searchers when a flash from shore informed them that the missing trio was safe.

It turned out that they had been saved only by an onshore wind which drove them ashore near a group of summer cottages. They aroused the occupants of one and were taken in for a change of clothing and hot drinks.

Lyon and the two girls told authorities later that they had bailed unceasingly after Johnson's dive overboard. At times, they said, they had given up hope of keeping the boat afloat or of being saved.

SAVED BY WIND

The craft was settling ominously and they stood knee-deep in water when the boat suddenly struck. Only then did they discover that a quirk of fate—the onshore wind—had driven them to shore as castaways.

Despite the blackness of the early morning, they were able to discern cottages and determined that they were ashore rather than cast on a reef. The trio then waded ashore.

After several hours' rest, all reported that they were none the worse for the experience.

Roxbury Flames Rout 15 From Beds

Fifteen persons, ten of them children, were driven out early today when fire broke out in a second-floor bedroom of a three-family house in Hillside street, Roxbury.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKiernan who were asleep when the fire started, awakened the other families in the house before carrying their daughter, Kathleen, 6, to safety.

The fire was confined to the second floor, but caused smoke and water damage throughout the house.

DAN CUPID SCOFFS AT 13-HOODOO

CHARLES MACKIE ALBERT FOSTER MISS JANE SALISBURY

When a girl and boy are in love, they aren't fretted by such imaginary menaces as the Friday-the-13th hoodoo. So here you see Albert York Foster, 21, of Bowditch road, Jamaica Plain, and his pretty fiancee, Miss Jane McGown Salisbury of Centre street, Jamaica Plain, filing marriage intentions at Boston City Hall, with never so much as a worried glance at the calendar. Taking their application for a license is Deputy Registrar Charles H. Mackie.

Blonde in Taxicab Poison Victim

An attractive 26-year-old blonde suffering from an overdose of sleeping powder, taken as she crossed West Boston bridge in a taxicab, was rushed early today to Boston City Hospital.

The stricken woman gave her name as Miss Helen Sullivan of Madison avenue, New York city.

The driver, Manuel Madeiros, of Spring street, West End, told police the woman hired him in Scollay square. She gave a Cambridge address at that time, he said.

As he crossed the bridge Madeiros noticed the woman had slumped to the floor of the cab. He stopped the car and dragged her to the sidewalk, where the fresh air partly revived her.

The cab driver quoted the woman as saying she had just taken 14 tablets of a poisonous nature. He placed her back in the cab and rushed her to the hospital.

When she arrived at the hospital she managed to give her name before lapsing into semiconsciousness.

B. & A. Shops Shut

West Springfield, Aug. 13 (AP)—The machine shops of the Boston & Albany Railroad here were closed today for an indefinite period, affecting some 200 workmen. The closing is said to be seasonal, to continue about a month.

SAFE ASHORE AFTER OCEAN ORDEAL

ROWLAND LYON HELEN WIRES DOROTHY NELSON

After facing imminent death for hours in a foundering sailboat, miles off Provincetown, these amateur yachting enthusiasts were glad to be safe ashore today, guests of Provincetown coastguardsmen. A change in wind blew the sailboat to land. Enjoying hot coffee and dry clothes, provided by coast guard officers, Rowland Lyon, Washington, D. C., artist; Miss Helen Wires, Boston Museum Art School student, and Miss Dorothy Neson of Chicago.

LIBERAL PROBE OF BOOK SALE, SNELL'S PLEA

Washington, Aug. 13 (INS)—Stung by action of the House Rules committee in tabling his resolution to investigate sale of Democratic campaign books to corporations, Rep. Snell, of New York, Republican House leader, today challenged Democratic "liberals" to take action.

Snell declared the evidence he presented to the committee showed that the sale of campaign books, autographed by the President, to corporations was an effort to avoid the federal corrupt practices act ban on corporation contributions.

"Many Democrats have talked about 'economic royalists,'" said Snell. "I am sure that when the evidence is brought to their attention, they will want the Democratic National Committee to return the money to these big corporations.

"The action of the House Rules committee was purely partisan. No more convincing evidence was ever presented in a request for an inquiry than the evidence I presented."

Snell charged the Democratic congressional committee is continuing the plan of obtaining money from corporations by selling advertisements in the Democratic Register, a party yearbook.

An affidavit by J. Edward Jones, New York oil man, who has tangled frequently with the Securities Exchange Commission, was among the information submitted by Snell. The affidavit, purporting to be a dictaphone record of a conversation between Jones and Myles Lasker, who was mentioned in the congressional tax inquiry as negotiating a radio contract with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, intimated that an indictment against Jones could be squelched if he bought campaign books.

The affidavit brought in the names of several prominent administration officials.

MAYOR STARTS NEW SUIT AGAINST FIN. COM.

hearing Monday and the Supreme Court action Wednesday.

Even if Mansfield loses in Superior Court, he will have another chance, before the higher tribunal.

DRISCOLL PLEA TODAY

The petition of William J. Driscoll, contractor, for release from Charles Street Jail comes up in Suffolk Superior Court late today before Judge Harold P. Williams.

Driscoll's dealings with city departments and with the George Robert White Fund are the subject of the present investigation by the Finance Commission.

Walking into the public hearing, in the City Council chamber, at 11:05 this morning, Mayor Mansfield was accompanied by Marc Robinson, a law associate of the Mayor's brother, Edmund. Robinson handed copies of the Supreme Court action to the newspaper reporters.

In this action the mayor stated he was going to court as an individual citizen, as mayor of Boston and as chairman of the trustees of the George Robert White Fund, a $5,000,000 public benefaction. Driscoll's Codman Hill concern has done all the repair work on the Boston buildings owned by the White Fund, during the last three years.

MAKES MANY CLAIMS

The mayor informed the high court that while he was being questioned as a witness before the Finance Commission, and before his examination was finished, his testimony was suddenly terminated.

He said he had further pertinent evidence to offer but the commission denied him his right of interrogating himself.

Obviously by reason of pre-arrangement among the members of the commission, the mayor said, he was later denied his right of cross-examining other witnesses and refused recognition either as witness or counsel.

"There has been some publicly introduced testimony that would be refuted by the testimony I wish to give," he added.

LASKER'S TERM EXPIRES

Another highlight of the day's developments in the Finance Commission's activities was disclosure that the term of David Lasker, as chairman of the commission, had expired last Monday.

This announcement was made by William L. Reed, secretary to the Governor's Council.

Reed stated, however, that Lasker still holds his position in the eyes of the law, as a holdover in office, and will continue in his present capacity until a successor is appointed by Governor Hurley and confirmed by the council.

It is generally believed Lasker will be reappointed by the Governor.

Lasker was appointed to the commission by Hurley April 14 and designated as chairman by the Governor. He filled the vacancy caused by the resignation of Philip A. Chapman. All the other members of the commission are appointees of former Governor James M. Curley.

The chairmanship alone pays a salary—$5000 a year.

HALL TESTIFIES

At today's hearing before the Finance Commission, Major Rosewell G. Hall, manager of the White Fund and superintendent of the city's public buildings, was called as a witness by Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph P. Brennan. Hall contradicted testimony given by Mark Linenthal, an engineer engaged by the Finance Commission.

The White Fund manager insisted that the Codman Hill work, which Linenthal said had apparently not been done, had been done and done well.

Major Hall caused a big surprise by testifying that in his opinion the real manager of the White Fund property was George Driscoll.

CALLS DRISCOLL MANAGER

George Driscoll, secretary of the White Fund, had testified he assumed no responsibility, not even to inspect the repair work. Hall, on the other hand, said Driscoll was counted upon by him to do that.

"What were George Driscoll's duties?" asked Assistant Corporation Counsel Brennan.

Major Hall replied:

"George Driscoll, in my opinion, has always been the actual manager of the White Fund real estate. He looked after the repairs and the tenants. I was manager in an advisory capacity. The work was always done by George Driscoll, in my opinion."

Counsel Farnum leaped to his feet and took over the witness, and a few minutes later Mayor Mansfield took a hand in the discussion.

"Can you find any vote of the trustees giving Driscoll any authority?" asked Farnum.

"No," said Hall.

Q—Did you ever tell the trustees that Driscoll was the real manager? A—No; I'm merely giving you my opinion. My opinion is that they probably thought so themselves.

NEW HEARING MONDAY

Q—The mayor is chairman of the trustees. Did he think that?

Mayor Mansfield (standing up and stepping forward)—Wait a minute. This witness is not talking for me.

Farnum—What basis had you for thinking that the chairman of the trustees thought so?

Major Hall—I don't think he did. Perhaps I shouldn't have made that statement. That was merely an opinion of mine, because Driscoll was taking all the responsibility.

Q—Let me ask you again, did the trustees think Driscoll was the actual manager? A—I'll recall that answer.

Q—Why did you make it in the first place? A—You ask me questions so fast that I might have been confused.

The hearing was adjourned until 2 p. m. Monday.

U. S. WARSHIPS GO IN ACTION AT SHANGHAI

tions of machine guns along the Whangpoo burst into action, spraying the river area with bullets.

HEADQUARTERS SHELLED

It was not known in Shangai whether the gunners were Chinese of Japanese. Their targets were just as obscure.

The machine gun emplacements were near the newly built Japanese airfield, at a bend of the river.

Heavy firing broke out tonight in the vicinity of Japanese headquarters at Hongkew, north of the International zone.

The heavy firing which began in late afternoon climaxed a long day of intermittent fights with machine guns and rifles between the Chinese and Japanese entrenched in fortified positions in the Chapei and Hongkew sectors.

The U. S. S. Augusta, flagship of the fleet, was steaming to Shanghai under forced draught with Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, the commander-in-chief, aboard. The Augusta was expected here Saturday from its summer base at Tsingtao.

SHIPS GET SET

Other units of the fleet were proceeding to defense positions all along the coast as the undeclared war between China and Japan became suddenly more serious with the beginning of hostilities at Shanghai.

Admiral Yarnell was understood to have ordered his fleet to take up stations in a position to guard every port in which American residents were likely to be endangered. The network of American warships will extend from Tientsin, in North China, far south to Canton.

The American patrol on the Yangtze deployed up and down the river at strategic points near Shanghai to back up the units of the Asiatic fleet.

Japanese Rush Troops to Shanghai

Tokyo, Aug. 13 (AP)—The Japanese government was understood today to have ordered additional warships, troops and planes rushed to the Shanghai war zone at the urgent request of the Japanese naval commander in China waters.

The action was understood to have followed a special cabinet meeting at which drastic emergency measures were decided on to deal with the situation at Shanghai, where fighting broke out this morning between Chinese and Japanese marines.

After the cabinet meeting the chief secretary announced the government had decided to take all measures necessary to protect Japanese lives and interests in Shanghai. There was no further amplification of the cabinet's action.

Chinese Block Japanese Advance

Peiping, Aug. 13 (AP)—Stubbornly-fighting Chinese regulars of the 89th division today blocked the northwestward advance of the Japanese army and held strategic Nankow pass in the face of a hot artillery fire and aerial bombardment.

Two regiments of the 89th—Japanese estimated their strength at 4000—were defending the southern approaches to the narrow mountain gateway to Manchuria against a mechanized Japanese brigade supported by heavy artillery and planes.

In a day-long battle yesterday the Japanese infantry, led by tanks spitting machine gun and light artillery fire, attacked and captured the deserted town of Nankow, 30 miles northwest of Peiping and the railroad station and shops of the Peiping-Kalgan railway, half a mile to the southeast.

No. Adams Couple Vanish With Son in Illinois

The mysterious disappearance of a young North Adams couple and their 18-months-old son was reported today in dispatches from Peoria, Ill.

Norman duPont, 33; his wife, Dorothy, 28, and the infant, Chester, left the home of relatives in Peoria Tuesday morning, and no word of them has been received since.

Police Supt. Leo Hamins of Peoria said that he feared that all three might be dead.

State police joined Hamins' force today to comb hundreds of acres of grasslands and the banks of the Illinois River in the search for the family.

Hamins told reporters that it was possible the missing trio might have met with foul play or an accident, but he said he had also learned DuPont was despondent because he had been jobless for a long time.

The DuPonts had gone from North Adams to Peoria three weeks ago to visit Mrs. Frank Stanley, a sister of Mrs. DuPont.

According to Mrs. Stanley, her sister had hoped DuPont might find work in that section.

When they departed Tuesday, Mrs. Stanley said, the DuPonts left their luggage and clothing behind, giving no intimation that they did not expect to return immediately.

Valencia, Aug. 13 (AP)—The Spanish Central Government issued a decree today making it an offense to molest a priest of any religion in the administration of a sacrament.

Nantasket Line Resumes Service

Service on the Nantasket-Boston Steamboat Company line resumed today after settlement of a short-lived strike which had curtailed two outbound and two inbound sailings.

The settlement was brought about through intervention of the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation, which effected agreement to a 10 per cent raise for all employes of the line.

3 Fliers Killed

Rome, Aug. 13 (AP)—The Stefani (Italian) News Agency announced tonight three fliers were killed and two injured when a seaplane from the Leghorn airport fell into the sea near Marina.

NOT IN MAYORAL RACE YET, SAYS M'CORMACK

Washington reports that he had decided to run for mayor of Boston and would announce his candidacy immediately upon adjournment of Congress were denied today to the Boston Evening American by Congressman John W. McCormack of South Boston.

The congressman, over the telephone from the capital, declared any such reports were "speculation" and that anyone writing that he had made a decision already in the matter was speculating.

"I'm too busy here with Congress even to think of the mayoralty," he said.

Told that "intimate friends" were reported as having claimed the support of Mayor Mansfield and Democratic and Republican leaders here in the mayoralty fight, McCormack characterized that, too, as "speculation."

EXCELLENT VOTE-GETTER

"I haven't arrived at any decision in this matter at all, but of course anyone is entitled to speculate."

The congressman is all ready to return to Boston with the adjournment of the present record session of Congress, but even then there will be plenty of time for his decision, in the event he does decide to make the fight.

Throughout his career, McCormack has been a fighter who never entered a campaign without a keen display of generalship and without being stampeded by report or rumor.

He has been a remarkable vote-getter and, like the late Congressman Billy Connery, has held all the friends he made during his career.

MANSFIELD SUPPORT

It is believed to be because of this that Mayor Mansfield wishes the congressman to run, confident that he can step ahead of any other aspirant.

Although McCormack himself has never said so, some friends have declared he would not hesitate about running for mayor if the field thinned down to a few candidates.

He would prefer, they say, to have former Governor Curley and former Mayor Nichols as opponents in a field of three, than having the ballots split among three times that number.

Last May a special trip to Washington was made by Mayor Mansfield, it was said, primarily in an attempt to have McCormack get into the mayoralty fight.

Strike Ties Up Lynn Sand Plant

Work at the Lynn Sand & Stone Co.'s plant was virtually at a standstill today as 15 striking truck drivers picketed the yard.

The strike was called yesterday by William A. Nealey, business agent f the Lynn local, Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate. The strikers were said to have demanded a closed shop in the hitherto unorganized industry. Theodore C. Cooke, president and general manager of the company, declared he was willing to negotiate.

WIFE HELD AFTER 5 DEATHS

Poison Traced To Ex-Teacher

MRS. ANNA MARIE HAHN

In One of Her Gay, Beer-Drinking Poses

HUSBAND TELLS ABOUT DRUG

Cincinnati, Aug. 13 (INS)—The mysterious death of a fifth elderly man acquainted with blonde Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, 31, former German school teacher, today complicated police investigation of her activities, shortly after a bottle of poison was taken from her husband's locker in a downtown telegraph office.

Officers received a report from August Schultz that George Gsellman, 67, a former neighbor, was seen in Mrs. Hahn's company shortly before his death, July 6. Gsellman's death was the fifth reported.

Held on a larceny charge, Mrs. Hahn, said to have been the widow of a Viennese physician, denied any connection with the five deaths under inquiry, including that of Ernest Kohler, elderly teamster, who died several years ago, willing her his home.

RECEIVES BIG SUMS

Lieutenant George Schattle declared investigation had shown that Mrs. Hahn had received from $50,000 to $70,000 in eight years from elderly friends.

The poison, taken from the locker of Mrs. Hahn's second husband, Philip, a telegraph operator, was said to induce violent dysentery. Hahn was not held, explaining he had kept the half-full bottle with the intention of turning it over to the authorities.

His refusal to return it to his wife, he told police, resulted in a domestic quarrel which led him to leave their home for a week.

Schultz, on reporting the most recent unsolved death, was confronted by Mrs. Hahn at police headquarters. When he saw her, he exclaimed:

"That's the woman!"

CONDUCTS AUTOPSIES

Inquiry began when Mrs. Hahn was accused of stealing a $300 ring in Colorado Springs, Col., where she traveled by train with George Obendoerfer, 67, a cobbler, who died shortly after their arrival there. Mrs. Hahn declared her son found the ring.

A larceny charge was placed against her by George Hei. He said he became ill after drinking beer and eating food she served him.

City Chemist Otto R. Behrer conducted autopsies on the body of Gsellman and those of Joseph Wagner 78 and Albert Palmer, 72, who died here in June and March, respectively. Mrs. Hahn was acquainted with both, papers in her home disclosed.

N. E. Governors Plan Flood Parley

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today New England governors or other representatives would confer soon with the Federal Power Commission over efforts to get Congressional approval of a Connecticut river flood control compact.

Asked if Governor Hurley of Massachusetts had requested a White House conference, the President told newspapermen officials of that state, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut would take the matter up with the power commission.

Judge Blasts MDC Police on Bathing Suit Arrests

Metropolitan police are just a bunch of mid-Victorians, Judge Frank D. Crowley declared today in Chelsea district court. He announced he would continue to dismiss all complaints against men brought before him for failing to wear tops with their bathing trunks at Revere Beach.

Informed that Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman had asserted police would continue the drive against the half-chasted bathers, Judge Crowley retorted testily:

"The metropolitan police are not keeping up with the times. They must remember that this is 1937 and make attempts to agree with the modern trend.

"The same police department had the same sort of trouble when women first started wearing one-piece bathing suits years ago.

"I will continue to dismiss all cases of that type when they come before me."

Torpedo 'Grazes' Yachts at Newport

Newport, R. I., Aug. 13 (AP)—A torpedo, fired from the submarine chaser Chacholot at a target in Newport Harbor today, veered from its course, zipped between the palatial yachts of Vincent Astor and Frederick H. Prince, swung on a tangent and struck the shore. It did not explode as target torpedoes are not charged.

Puzzled by the antics of the torpedo, officials reclaimed it and were to dissect it to determine its defect.

Youth Found Dying After Visiting Wife

After paying a visit last night to his wife, who is in Hull, Alfred Pink, 22, of Baltimore, Md., was found unconscious in the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ira Saxe, in Waumbeck street, Roxbury, today.

According to police, six gas jets in the kitchen stove were opened and Pink was on the floor. Gas company attendants revived him. Dr. Samuel Lawson sent Pink to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

Ousting of Blonde School Teacher Upheld in Pa.

Mercer, Pa., Aug. 13 (AP)—A common pleas court judge today refused to restore to blonde Florence Beresford the teacher's job she lost when a country school board charged she was incompetent because her pupils threw rubber bands on a hot stove.

Judge George H. Rowley of Mercer county court said today he upheld the board's right to dismiss the young teacher, in the first case of its kind in Pennsylvania. Explaining his decision, the judge said:

"The testimony at the Lake township school board hearing indicated that the pupils threw rubber bands on the stove, that some of them smoked and that Miss Beresford sometimes didn't arrive at the school in time to ring the school bell."

Attorney L. R. Rickard, counsel for the teacher, said Miss Beresford denied all the charges.

ALL GEORGIA SCHOOLS MUST FLY U. S. FLAG

Special to Boston Evening American

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 13—The state board of education has ordered all Georgia schools to fly the American flag and ordered all students to salute and pledge daily allegiance to it.

Teachers who fail to abide by this new ruling will not be paid.

The action was taken in a resolution adopted unanimously by the board.

The order applies to white and negro schools, both large and small, of the public school system of Georgia, Governor Rivers said in making the announcement.

The department of education was instructed to promulgate the ritual of raising and lowering the flag.

The board will not undertake to supply flags for the various schools, it was stated.

Stanley A. Jones, state adjutant of the American Legion of Georgia, announced the Legion would "take this resolution under its wing" and sponsor the movement to see that every school is provided with a flag.

He said the State Legion would contact all of its posts in the state and request them to sponsor drives for school flags in the communities.

R. I. OFFICIAL THREATENED WITH DEATH

the cash sums demanded were not paid.

Cunningham told this newspaper that he was more concerned for the safety of his son, Philip, Jr., than for his own life, because in the beginning he had regarded the letter as the work of a maniac.

FEARS FOR BOY

"I should have ben reassured when I heard no more," he said, "but I am afraid of such a person getting at my boy. I have received no threats of any kind since that letter, but then I wouldn't—with police and federal agents on the job."

James Dalton, chief of the Hartford office of the ederal bureau of investigation, Depatment of Justice, has been woking with Povidence inspectos of the postal depatment on the theat letters, it was learned.

Not all the letters were typewritten, but all o them were on the same kind of stationery, all were mailed in the heart of Providence postal district, most of them around the same datees.

Some of the notes, scrawled in longhand, gave investigators their best hope of tracing down the writers.

Slain Doctor's Widow Witness at Inquest

Providence, Aug. 13—Just four weeks from the day that Dr. George W. Webster was slain in the hallway of his exclusive East Side home, his wodow, Mrs. Kathryn Craig Webster was called to the coroner's inquest today.

Clad completely in black, head bowed to avoid the stares of spectators, Mrs. Webster was hurried into the offices of Coroner Conrad K. Strauss by a side door.

She was accompanied by a girl secretary of former Attorney-General Charles P. Sisson, who is counsel for Mrs. Webster and the Webster estate.

INSIDE THREE HOURS

Some reports were that this companion was Mrs. Carl A. Lindblad, at whose home Mrs. Webster sought seclusion after the slaying, but these rumors were speedily put to rest by those who knew Mrs. Lindblad.

While her companion remained in an outer room of Coroner Strauss' suite, Mrs. Webster remained inside for a little less than three hours, leaving shortly after 1 p. m.—also by a police-protected side door.

During the interview, which was the first Mrs. Webster had given investigators since the day after the tragedy, First Assistant Attorney-General John A. Nolan and Sergeant-Inspector Edmund M. Crowley were closeted with her and Coroner Strauss.

It was said, at the conclusion of her interview that this would be the end of the inquest, but neither the coroner nor the other two officials would comment on that.

FIRST APPEARANCE

For Sergeant Crowley, regarded as the ace-investigator of the police department, it was, like Mrs. Webster, a first appearance at the inquest.

Lieutenant Bryan K. Annable had previously been in attendance. Annable was one of the first to reach Dr. Webster's side when he was dying from the bullet wounds of a mysterious assailant the morning of July 16.

No official statement was given out after the widow's appearance today, but it was learned that questioning was directed almost entirely to the slain society physician's private life and friends, and that Mrs. Webster had given investigators "leads" on certain phases of the case that are considered important.

If, as it is said, the inquest is now over, Coroner Strauss will begin immediately to draw up his report, to be presented to the superior court and to Attorney-General John P. Hartigan sometime next week.

FEELING SEW-SEW

International News Photograph Service

Mrs. Grace Coolidge, widow of the former president, who is spending a vacation at the home of her friend, Mrs. F. B. Adams, at Northport, Me., is employing a part of her time making covers for the porch furniture of the summer cottage, at which chore she is pictured here. Mrs. Coolidge as well as her hostess reside at Northampton, Mass., at other seasons.

FREE 20 QUINCY CLAM DIGGERS

City officials and the municipal government of Quincy today were threatened with a suit by a group of clam diggers who were acquitted on charges of operating without a city permit.

Police yesterday arrested 20 men in three raids along the waterfront in Wollaston, Adams Shore and the Merrymount section. The raids followed a series of complaints by residents.

All of the men had State digger's permits. Judge Stuart McLeod, in Quincy court, dismissed the charges after City Councillor Avery Gilkerson, representing the diggers, pleaded that the city permit order of 1933 had been invalidated when the state took control of the industry in 1935.

Gilkerson said he would bring suit on behalf of the men to recover all fees paid the city for local permits since enactment of the State bill.

He declared, also, that those arrested would sue Mayor Thomas E. Burgin and Police Chief John J. Avery, who ordered the raids, for false arrest.

Missing Girl, 13, Sought in Maine

Elizabeth Hodgkinson, 13, missing for two weeks from Hyde Park, is believed to be hitch-hiking in Maine, police revealed today.

Her mother, Mrs. W. J. Hodgkinson, sent a plea to police at Portland, asking that they send a broadcast through that state.

Smith Funeral

Rutland, Vt., Aug. 13—Simple rites were being arranged here today for Former Governor Charles M. Smith, 69, who died yesterday after a long illness.

Weymouth High Principal Found Dead in Bed

Fred H. Hilton, 60, for 27 years principal of Weymouth High school, was found dead in bed early today at his home, 24 King Oak terrace North Weymouth.

The principal had complained of a minor indisposition yesterday, but nothing was thought of it.

Hilton was born in Maine and was graduated from Bates College in 1896. Later he taught school in Attleboro, Warren and Eastport, Me., and was appointed principal in Weymouth in 1910.

He was a Mason and a former president of the Weymouth Rotary Club. He had been a widower for 10 years. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Downee, a son, Warren, and his brother.

Malibu Beach Bathhouse Opens

The new bathhouse at Malibu Beach, Dorchester, erected by the Metropolitan District Commission, was officially opened today.

Captain Joseph P. F. Rooney of the Blue Hills Metropolitan Police, turned the bathhouse over to Charles Carroll of Linden street, Dorchester, manager.

Representative Thomas P. Hannon of Dorchester, father of the bill that gave the beach to Dorchester, was present. Others in attendance were Representatives Bernard Casey and Joseph Murphy, both of Dorchester.

Crews on Tankers Stage Sit-Down

Providence, R. I., Aug. 13 (AP) Sit-down strikes broke out today on two oil tankers in the harbor here. They are the Java Arrow, which arrived from Port Arthur, Tex., last night, and the Paulsboro, which arrived today from Corpus Christi.

Representatives of the National Maritime Union here said about 70 men were involved and that the strike was in protest against "conditions of work."

Factory Closes On Strike Threat

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 13 (INS)—The Monarch Bus Company, one of Troy's oldest factories, closed its doors for an indefinite period today as a result of strike threats.

Two-thirds of the company's workers met last night and voted to demand higher wages, shorter hours and a closed shop.

TUCKER CHARGES WIFE FAILS TO SUPPORT 3

Gloucester, Aug. 13—Burton Tucker, erstwhile "Cinderella Groom," today added another bizarre chapter to his stormy matrimonial saga when he charged his grandaunt-wife, Mrs. Olive S. Tucker, with non-support of their three children.

The complaint was filed with Court Clerk Harold Armstrong in Gloucester District Court and a hearing was set for Monday before Judge Edward Morley.

On the same day in the same court, Tucker will be given a hearing on a similar charge lodged against him last week by Mrs. Tucker.

30 NOW, 17 WHEN WED

Now 30, Tucker was 17 years old in 1923 when he married his grandaunt, [illegible] years his senior in 1923. At that time he issued the following statement to reporters:

"Nothing can separate me from my wife. We will always love each other—until death do us part!"

The language in his complaint against his estranged spouse, however, was far different. Referring to Mrs. Tucker's assertion that she was destitute and the children forced to pick berries for food, Tucker declared:

"My wife claims that the minor children were forced during the past two weeks to pick blueberries and sell them to obtain enough food to eat.

SAYS WIFE IN N. Y.

"If such a claim is true, I feel that Mrs. Tucker is wilfully neglecting and refusing to provide proper support, as I feel that she is financially able to support them now as she has since their birth."

The former grocery store employe said his wife, who is the daughter of a wealthy clergyman, had driven to New York in her expensive new sedan.

A New York judge last March acquitted Tucker of a charge of abandonment brought in that State by his wife. Before he left her, though, Mrs. Tucker alleged, her husband had dissipated her $800,000 fortune.

Tucker now lives in Essex. Mrs. Tucker and the children, Vivian, 13; Violet, 12; and Burton, Jr., 10, are living with the mother's sister, Mrs. George A. Storey in Bray street, Gloucester.

FEDERAL PROBE OF 'EXTRAS' LAUNCHED

Federal investigation into alleged "extras" given contractors doing jobs for the public works department continued today, with a committee of the executive council co-operating.

In a surprise visit to Lieutenant-Governor Kelly., J. N. Horan, special agent of the investigating division of the Federal Department of the Interior, made a request for all available information relating to public works jobs in Massachusetts.

The committee, of which the Lieutenant-Governor is a member, has been investigating compensation awarded contractors on these jobs for several weeks. Its findings are not expected to be reported until an August 25th meeting.

Kelly made public last week a statement that the committee had learned the "extras" allowed on 24 of the contracts under investigation amounted to more than $1,000,000.

Horan questioned Kelly at length regarding details of the committee's findings. The Lieutenant-Governor informed him that the committee had authorized Councillor Edward T. Collins of West Springfield to look into possible collusion among contractors in fixing bids so that the winner of the contract would be certain to gea a good price.

It is believed the federal probe will embrace all the work done in Massachusetts during the years the government has contributed funds towards public works projects.

WAR ON CRIME ORDERED HERE

Acting Superintendent of Police John M. Anderson today ordered all division captains to wage relentless war on crime over the week-end.

He ordered a special watch against safe robbers and precautions against holdups at offices and factories where payrolls are met in cash.

Radio cars must be prepared to close all main highways leading out of the city, and all officers must observe car numbers, according to Anderson, to recover stolen cars, as these are generally used in larger crimes.

Suspicious persons should be arrested and placed in the lineup at headquarters, he added.

Anderson also appealed to the public to report suspicious incidents to Devonshire 1212.

Link 'Little Man' to Triple Killing

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (AP)—The state lined up witnesses today for an attempt to show that Albert Dyer returned to the scene of the triple child murder he is charged with committing.

"One of them was a little fellow," Deputy Sheriff John Morrell said yesterday, in testifying that two men with WPA crossing guard caps helped officers remove the bodies of three little Inglewood girls from a ravine in the Baldwin Hills, June 28.

Dyer, a crossing watchman at the time of the slayings, is of slight build, and prosecutors said witnesses would identify him as "the little fellow."

Victims of the triple killing were Melba and Madeline Everett and Jeanette Stephens. They were found strangled and ravished in the rockey ravine. The Everett girls were formerly of Dorchester, Mass.

The prosecutors said they had other witnesses who would trace Dyer and the girls into the hills.

Tuna Troller Lands 281-Llb. Halibut

While trolling for tuna near Liverpool, N. S., F. A. Renard of Short Hills, N. J., hooked and landed a halibut weighing 281 pounds, according to reports reaching friends here. The big fish was hooked 20 feet below the surface, although ordinarily halibut are caught close to the bottom of the sea.

Clue Indicates Dancer Still Alive

Paris, Aug. 13 (US)—A clue indicating that Miss Jean De Koven, missing New York dancer, was alive and at liberty as late as August 5 was uncovered by the French surete today as they pressed their inquiry into her disappearance.

A cashier at the Paris exposition told detectives that on that day a girl resembling Miss De Koven cashed a travellers' check with him.

Democrat Chords Little Off Key

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

There ain't much harmony in hill-billy music, but it keeps on going. There ain't much harmony in the Democratic party but it's still doing business.

Jim Farley says there won't be any reprisals, but Jim's statements are like weather reports. No guarantees go with 'em.

One thing is certain. Things ain't so bad in the Democratic party as the G. O. P. hopes they are.

Tuesday's Democratic banquet in Washington brought up a new problem in the city of magnificent distances. The problem is, how far can you sit apart at a get-together dinner.

Cambridge Crash Injures Woman

Mrs. Daisy Kelley, 44, of Haviland street, was injured in an auto crash at Bay and Green streets, Cambridge, today. Two stitches were taken to close a gash in the back of her head.

She was riding in a car operated by Frank W. Kelley of Central street, West Concord, which was in collision with a truck operated by Carl F. Otell of Preston road, Somerville.

Girls' Shorts Fine, Says Ware Chief

Ware, Aug. 13—Authorities in Milford may bar shorts in streets if they wish, but Police Chief B. W. Buckley of Ware declared today it is conduct that counts in this community—and not a person's garb.

"The girls may wear shorts and halters, or whatever garments they deem fit, within reason so long as their conduct is as excellent as always," said the athletic chief.

"We've never had any trouble with the summer people here and we're not going to start to pick on them now, particularly without a good reason. Shorts are all right and they're sensible."

With some 50 summer camps in the vicinity of Ware, the town has a summer visitor population of approximately 600—many of them shorts-clad girls and women.

Rugg Rests Home, Steadily Gains

Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court rested at his home in Worcester today, after being released from Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital late yesterday.

His condition is now vastly improved, physicians said. For three weeks the jurist lay critically ill at the hospital, confined under an oxygen tent for several days.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

City Councillor Clem Norton recent-returned from England after another of his summer jaunts to far spots (Ask Mayor Freddie!) . . . While walking London's Strand, who should he bump into but the Back Bay's Rep. Geo. Roberts (whose Lady is now ill in a London hosp.) . . .

"Hi," sez Clem, and he reveals he's just bought a doggy pipe for Councillor Peter Murray of Jamaica Plain.

"Hi," sez Geo., right back, and it turns out he's just purchased a lb. of Scotch Presbyterian tobacco (that's its tag, so'elpus) for none other than the same Peter.

Overcome by the coincidence, Norton lugged both articles back for his council confrere . . .

Leads in Film For Ritz Boys

By HARRIET PARSONS

(Copyright, 1937, Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Aug. 13—Darryl Zanuck has decided to put a stop to this picture thievery on the part of the Ritz Brothers. The boys practically walked off with "You Can't Have Everything." So Darryl's giving them a picture they won't have to steal—a starring vehiall their own.

It's titled "Mr. Nickelby Sits Down" and is a farce musical about a sit down strike. Alfred Prowitt, Chicago newspaperman, wrote the original and Nunally Johnson will begin production in September. Jack Haley is the only other member of the cast set so far.

Harriet Parsons

After "Mr. Nickelby" the irrepressible trio will be seen in "Moonstruck," still another of the long list of musicals scheduled at Twent-Cent-Fox.

Problem of a leading lady for Warner's "Hollywood Hotel" is solved at last. Story really calls for two femme leads—a temperamental star and an unknown little gal who is called in to double for her when she walks out. Original plan was to have both parts played by the same actress. Studio tried to get Ginger Rogers and failed. Bette Davis was then assigned the role, but was taken ill. Margaret Lindsay made an excellent test, but it was felt a girl was needed who could do song and dance routines.

At the preview of "Varsity Show" the other night, Lola Lane's sister, Rosemary, scored a hit and it was remarked how much she resembled Lola. Yep—you guessed it—Lola will play the temperamental star and Rosemary gets a great break as the little double.

* * *

Fred Allen's three leading ladies for "Sally, Irene and Mary" will be Alice Faye, Louise Gypsy Rose Lee Hovick, and Joan Davis, the gal who did the uproarious dance on her heels in "Wake Up and Live." Allen arrives August 20 to start preparation. Incidentally, wonder if Alice and ex-strip-teaser Hovick will call a truce during this one. They didn't get along too well during filming of "You Can't Have Everything."

* * *

Wallace Ford, just back from an extended and successful venture in British films, has signed with Grand National for four pictures. First will be "He Wanted to Marry," an original by Clarence Marks. Dave Diamond will start production as soon as he finds an actor for the Captain Flagg-ish role opposite Wally.

* * *

Line or two: Latest result of the Sam Goldwyn-Mervyn Leroy lovefest is that Merv is loaning Lana Turner to Sam for the role of Binnie Barnes' naughty little handmaiden in "Marco Polo." Lana is the Leroy discovery who made her debut as the murdered high school girl in "They Won't Forget."

Snapshots of Hollywood

GINGER ROGERS and BARBARA STANWYCK getting the laugh of their lives when they paused to chat on the RKO lot and discovered that the secret hideaways far, far from Hollywood which they'd picked for their respective vacations were one and the same Canadian village. BINNIE BARNES and JEAN NEGULESCO causing quite a stir in front of Sardi's when they paused for a goodbye kiss following a luncheon.

BURGESS MEREDITH planing out last night for New York and his Connecticut farm. PHYLLIS BROOKS, who's been "going steady" with CARY GRANT at a night spot with MICHAEL WHALEN for a change. GERTRUDE MICHAEL heading for the Cape Cod Theater to appear opposite PHIL HUSTON in OSCAR SERLIN'S new play, "Damn Deborah." LOUISE HENRY laid up with a cold caught when a friend pushed her into her own pool during a garden party. That's all today.

"Suzy" Headlines Tremont Bill

Tremont's proven pictures program for today and tomorrow includes "Suzy," co-starring Jean Harlow and Franchot Tone, and "Stolen Holiday," with Kay Francis and George Brent. The Sunday film feature will be "One in a Million."

COFFEE FOR TWO

Ann Sheridan appears to be more interested in Pat O'Brien than in pouring the coffee in this scene from "San Quentin," which is the current attraction on the Paramount and Fenway screens.

'Knight Without Armor' Thrilling, Superbly Acted

By PEGGY DOYLE

If dull care and the necessity of collecting a weekly pay-check are keeping you in town these dog-days, you can't do better than to sashay over to the Keith Memorial some time this week and treat yourself to something pretty special in the way of entertainment.

THE CAST

Alexandra	Marlene Dietrich
A. J.	Robert Donat
Duchess	Irene Vanbrugh
Vladinoff	Herbert Lomas
Colonel Adra[illegible]	Austin Trevor
Axelstein	Basil Gill
Maronin	David Tree
Poushkoff	John Clements
Stanfield	Frederick Culley
Forrester	Lawrence Hanray
Maid	Dorice Fordred
Tomsky	Franklin Kelsey
Commissar	Lawrence Kingston
Station Master	Hay Petrie
Drunken Red soldier	Miles Malleson
Barger	Lyn Harding
White Officer	Raymond Huntley

"Knight Without Armor" is all of that. Intelligence, taste, beauty and inspiration have gone into the making of this thrilling and distinguished London film production. And, it is interesting to note, Producer Alexander Korda flagrantly disregarded that celebrated nationalistic command, "Buy British" when he went shopping for talent for his latest cinematic triumph.

He chose Hollywood's ace scenarist, Frances Marion, to do the adaptation from the novel, "Without Armor," by England's James Hilton, Belgium's Jacques Feyder to direct it and Germany's Marlene Dietrich to co-star with England's Robert Donat in it. Korda, by the way, is Hungarian by birth.

* * *

There have been changes in the Hilton novel but Dietrich fans, especially, will find them more than acceptable, for Miss Marion has made them the sooner to introduce the magnetic Marlene into the story. Hilton's hero Fothergill, in the screen version, has reached maturity and is engaged upon his literary translations in Russia at the picture's beginning.

As the Countess Alexandra, the orchidaceous Miss Dietrich is provided with her usual platinum setting—a fabulous estate, a Duchess of Windsor wardrobe (fit for a king, excuse please) and a retinue of servants providing the type of gilt-edged service that must have prevailed in the czar's palace.

But the year 1918 and the Russian Reds change all that. Countess Alexandra and all the other aristocrats are routed from their great estates and either "rubbed out," as our quaint underworld argot has it, or hunted like animals across the far-flung reaches of the one-time proud country of the czars.

The Englishman Fothergill, played superbly by Donat, has become a member of the British secret service and in the interests of the service has joined the Russian revolutionaries.

The meeting of these two charming people is accomplished when the countess, arrested by the Reds and ordered to Petrograd for trial and execution, is consigned to the commissar's custody. Donat, the commissar's first assistant, is assigned to escort the breath-takingly beautiful white Russian to her rendezvous with death. You've guessed what happens—at first sight of her his heart is hers.

Their love story progresses with their adventures—thrilling, vivid adventures that leave you at the picture's end as spent, well, almost, as if you'd participated in them.

* * *

The picture's one false note possibly is Miss Dietrich's social equanimity (she'd rate 100 per cent at Miss Spence's on this score) and exquisite grooming in the face of the constant danger and apparent lack of the necessaries of beauty upkeep on her enforced adventure quest.

Donat, always an excellent actor, and John Clements, screen newcomer, in the role of the young commissar who gave his life for his new-found friendly enemies, are splendid. Another striking portrayal is Basil Gill's Axelstein.

By HARRIS MORGAN

One of the screen's most authentic and effective jail-breaks and man-hunts distinguish Warner Brothers' First National production, "San Quentin," which, with "Marry the Girl," makes up the screen program at the Paramount and Fenway this week.

These successive sequences are of such stuff as makes newspaper headlines and provide some of the most exciting minutes that have ever had you on the edge of a movie seat.

San Quentin Penitentiary has served as the immediate background for much of the picture.

* * *

First and formost in the cast are Pat O'Brien, that stalwart Irishman, who has a way of getting inside his characterizations and making them flesh-and-blood; Humphrey Bogart, probably the screen's best "baddie," if you know what we mean; Barton MacLane, whose bullying has that top-sergeant zeal of authority a poor private can best appreciate.

Good-looking Ann Sheridan, who plays opposite O'Brien, is new to featured roles. She fails to put any punch into her love scenes with O'Brien, who, not a Romeo type, needs plenty of co-operation to get over the romantic hurdles.

"San Quentin," nevertheless, is a thoroughly interesting picture, with its authentic prison background and its stark closeups of life as it is lived behind bars. Many of its scenes were made in and around the well-known Californian penitentiary.

Briefly, Bogart is Miss Sheridan's convict-brother. She has just met O'Brien, an army officer, in the cafe where she is employed as an entertainer. In the company of two brother officers, he is saying farewell to night-life and gaiety against his departure the next day for San Quentin where he has been assigned as captain of the yard.

* * *

The army officers are still in the cafe when a shot is heard. Bogart, who has just begged some money from his sister, has been shot and captured by the police who have been seeking him for a bank holdup.

In the prison, O'Brien, glimpsing some good beyond Bogart's surface hardness, tries to help him and does until the prison grapevine system relays to him gossip linking his sister and O'Brien. There is an escape, in which Bogart participates, a convict-hunt and finally, having learned O'Brien's right intent, the fatally wounded Bogart's return to prison.

TOPS ON SCREEN

Met's 'Artists and Models' Guided To Heights by Jack Benny

"Artists and Models" is so full of everything that the miracle is it has escaped being cinematic hash and achieves the stature of a Grade-A musical comedy, and this is due in large part to the perfect direction of Raoul Walsh and the positively elegant chairmanship of Jack Benny.

THE CAST

Mac Brewster	Jack Benny
Paula Sewell	Ida Lupino
Alan Townsend	Richard Arlen
Cynthia Wentworth	Gail Patrick
Jupiter Pluvius 2d	Ben Blue
Toots	Judy Canova
Lois Townsend	Kathryn Kay
Stella	Cecil Cunningham
Mrs. Townsend	Hedda Hopper
Dr. Zimmer	Donald Meek

And the Yacht Club Boys, Louis Armstrong, Martha Raye, Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra, Connie Boswell, Judy, Anne and Zeke, Russell Patterson's "Personettes" and the Water Waltzers, Mary Shepherd and Gloria Wheedon.

The positively psychic Met clientele, which has a bird-dog nose for smash-hits, was out in droves, overflowing the lobby, at yesterday's first show. This evidence of good-will was more than gratifying to the management, which thus gauges the week's potential box-office receipts.

The picture's script reeks with humor, and if it isn't "Buck" Benny's own diamond-cut brand, at least he gets off his "sides" precisely as though he made 'em up out of his own head.

He has ample co-operation from his romantic side-kick, Ida Lupino, that de-lovely, little English girl, who is finally coming into her own; good-appearing Richard Arlen and handsome Gail Patrick. But we still insist he's the lad who ties it all together, at the same time managing in his artless way to be one of the best little heart-breakers of the season. And mind you, he accomplishes this in his first starring picture. Darn clevah, these Bennys!

* * *

Cast as one of those super-advertising agency heads, Benny's newest and biggest account is the Townsend silver account. Dick Arlen, head of the Townsend organization, has in mind a top-hat advertising campaign with the human interest angle, the selection of a Townsend girl who must be a social registerite. That lets out the luscious Lupino, who models for the Benny accounts, Mister Benny regrets.

Not the Lupino, however. Overhearing that Arlen is Miami-bound, she hops a plane, meets him, makes him fall in love with her and beg her to be the Townsend girl without a hint from her.

The patrician Miss Patrick, who comes to sell Benny advertising space in a "400" society program, just as effortlessly becomes Benny's candidate for the Townsend girl synecure.

Before each boy gets his girl, Ben Blue and Judy Canova are presented in an eccentric comedy skit; Martha Raye goes Harlem, singing and cavorting to Louis Armstrong's band music; Andre Kostelanetz and his superb symphonic syncopaters give you "Whispers in the Dark"; Connie Boswell interludes with a song and a brace of the country's first illustrators are introduced to you with variations.

* * *

They are McClelland Barclay, Peter Arno, Russell Patterson, John LaGatta, Arthur William Brown and Rube Goldberg. The versatile Patterson comes through with a bit of spoofery that is sheer genius. His Patterson's Personettes, a Tiller-Girl chorus of wooden dolls, have a production number of their own, with trick lighting, etcetera. They are winked at and ogled throughout by Mr. "Esquire," the white-weskitted old gent with the hard-boiled-egg eyes who is the highly-colored trademark for that for-men-only magazine.

"Artists and Models" is one of the fastest and funniest musical comedies you've yet to see and so well has the suave and witty Benny timed his drolleries that they never impinge on each other and leave you cheated of the tag-lines. P. H.

Lynn's New Auto Theater

E. M. Loew's new Lynn Open-Air Automobile Theater on the Lynnway, near the General Edwards bridge, will have its formal opening tomorrow evening, with many public officials and other notables in attendance. The evening performance, continuous until midnight, will start at 8 p. m.

This newest in the E. M. Loew's chain of 42 New England theaters has been patterned after the popular Hollywood Drive-In Theater and is a most acceptable contribution to summer evening entertainment.

Built at a cost of more than $50,000 and covering an area of 10 acres, Lynn's new outdoor motor theater accommodates over 500 cars. Occupants of cars at a distance of 500 feet away are enabled to see and hear as well as those in the first rows, thanks to powerful projectors.

LILLIAN'S TACT EASES ALL TENSION

CHAPTER 378

I DID NOT glance at Lillian and I knew that she felt the same reluctance to look in my direction as Mother Graham said that she felt she must hurry to complete the beautifully-colored afghans she was planning.

For we knew only too well what the aged woman, frail of body but indomitable of spirit, meant by her reference.

We hope that she may be spared to us for many years, but there is always the possibility that her weak heart may fail to function at some crisis of illness or undue excitement, and that we may lose her.

It was difficult to frame a reply which would ignore the possibility she was voicing, but Lillian accomplished it almost instantly.

"You certainly have set yourself a job few women would care to undertake," she said, infusing just the right amount of awed admiration into her voice. "I never saw anything so gorgeous as that blending of colors in the one you made for Madge. Is Mary's like it?"

"Exactly the same," my mother-in-law returned, infinite pride in her voice. "Mary and Marion both said, when I told them I intended making afghans for their hope chests, that they wanted them exactly like Madge's."

LILLIAN IS SURPRISED

"Hope chests?" Lillian interposed sharply, a hostile note in her voice which I knew I was interpreting correctly.

"Yes," I said quickly, frantically signalling her to silence. "Isn't it wonderful to have a gift like that promised for a girl's hope chest?"

Lillian caught the cue.

"Indeed it is," she said cordially but I knew I should have the reaction later.

Mother Graham beamed her pleasure at our praise.

"Of course, Mary's can hardly be called a hope chest now," she said. "It's a fulfilled one now as well as one filled full"—she smiled at her own whimsicality—"although she still has to have hope for this afghan I'm making. But Marion's is a hope chest, and I told the dear child I wanted the afghan to be the first article she put in it. She promised so prettily, and I am anxious to get at it. Mary's is nearly done now. I only have two hundred daisies yet to make."

I was balancing on the traditional tenterhooks for fear Lillian should not be able to conceal her displeasure at this mention of a hope chest for her young daughter, but I discounted her self-control.

"Two hundred daisies! My word!" she said, picking up a corner of the incompleted afghan and looking at it. "Why, how many are there in the whole thing?"

EASY PATTERN

"Thirteen hundred," my mother-in-law said, with the indescribable air of prideful triumph which a good needlewoman generally wears in discussing her work.

"Thirteen hundred!" Lillian repeated feebly. "But, surely, you aren't planning to make Marion's as large?"

"Of course I am," my mother-in-law said indignantly. "Do you think I'd skimp that dear child's gift by a single daisy?"

"But it's such a tremendous task," Lillian said. "Aren't they terribly hard to make?"

"They're the easiest part of it," my mother-in-law said. "Anybody can make the daisies after a few trials."

"I'd like to try them," Lillian said with the soon-regretted enthusiasm aroused in most women when contemplating beautiful needlework.

"I'll show you," my mother-in-law said promptly. "I've always wanted to make you an afghan, but after I had completed Margaret's and one for my daughter, Harriet, Mary's wedding came along, and I wanted her to have one. But you could make one for yourself easily, in your spare time."

I felt an unholy desire to laugh, for Lillian has a distinct distaste for needlework of any kind, and she has often said that her husband loves her in spite of the socks she has darned instead of because of them. But I did not see just how she was going to get out of accepting this offer which my mother-in-law had made in answer to her specious enthusiasm.

SHOW YOUR TALENTS FOR PICKLING NOW

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST Over STATION WMEX

If the weatherman hasn't burned all of your cucumbers in the garden, you will be thumbing through your recipe files this week for your favorite pickling recipes.

Pickles in moderation are a delightful accompaniment to any luncheon or dinner and are really easy to make.

Here are some basic recipes for pickles that you will want.

SOUR PICKLE SYRUP

(For general use for all sour pickling). Products to be used are usually sprinkled with salt and allowed to stand overnight, then drained. Cooked syrup is then poured over pickles unless otherwise specified.

2 quarts vinegar
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon whole cloves
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 tablespoon peppercorns
1 tablespoon mustard seed
(Spices tied in cheese cloth bag)

This syrup is suitable for all cabbage, pepper, celery, onion, green tomatoes, stuffed mango, etc., recipes. Put into sterilized jars and seal.

SWEET PICKLE SYRUP (FRUITS)

The following are good proportions for all sweet fruit pickles:

1 quart vinegar
4 cups brown sugar
½ oz. cinnamon stick
½ oz. whole cloves

Boil vinegar, sugar and spices and pour boiling hot over chopped or sliced ingredients. Let stand 24 hours, boil up and pour over; repeat 3 times. With last heating, pack immediately into sterilized jars and seal. This syrup is suitable for all peaches, pears, watermelon rind, plums, etc.

Cohasset's Annual Horse Show Attracts Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

A MOVIE PRODUCER, seeking a scene illustrating the country life of American horse-loving gentry . . . similar to the horse fairs of the rural squires in England . . . could have found no more perfect setting than the private show ring on Mrs. Hugh Bancroft's Deer Hill Farm at the opening of the Cohasset Horse Show yesterday . . .

MRS. FRANCIS GLEASON

The horseshoe-shaped, covered grandstand, sporting a fresh coat of white paint and a fringe of vari-colored flags flapping idly on their tall white poles, formed a bright and sparkling oasis in a sun-baked countryside . . .

The cool-looking, well-kept grass in the center of the ring and the brisk energy of the horses as they displayed their gaits before a fashionable gathering of South Shoreites, made one forget the heat and the lazy languor of the afternoon . . .

Back of the grandstand . . . in the long rows of white stalls where the small army of grooms, trainers and thoroughbreds have set up a three-day encampment . . . there was all the hustle and bustle of saddling, harnessing and grooming . . . which goes with preparing horses for the show ring or track . . . no matter what the weather . . .

Martha Chapin, Madge Burnett, Ann Chapin and Mrs. Francis Gleason . . . whose job it was to sell programs or chances on a pair of Himalayan rabbits donated by Mrs. William C. Cox . . . or on a pony or a dog . . . took their tip from the energy of the horsemen and enthusiastically tackled their job of overcoming the warm-day sales resistance of their friends . . .

No horse show would be complete without the presence of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox . . . who are not only exhibiting a dozen or so horses, but also have a houseful of guests for the three-day show . . . Mrs. William MacColl of Providence, one of the Coxes' guests, wore a simple cotton of black and white pin stripes . . . while Mrs. Cox's outfit combined a dubonnet, blue and white checked dress with a short dubonnet jacket, and a little turban effectively combining the blue and dubonnet . . . Her mother, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, had a number of out-of-town guests in her box . . . and Mrs. Horace Drinkwater, another prominent South Shore resident, was surrounded by a group of friends . . .

One of the season's debs, Lee Hyde of Duxbury and Boston, was a chic little spectator in a red and white printed cotton frock with a large natural straw hat . . . she spent much of the afternoon with Mary C. Morrison of St. Louis, who is spending the month of August with her aunt, Mrs. Frederick Rice of Brookline and Cohasset . . .

* * *

Mimi Blake Sells Programs

ELLIE VAN KLEECK was both useful and ornamental as she sold chances in a navy polka dots dress and Mimi Blake induced practically everyone present to purchase a program . . . Les Blake pitched in and did her bit, as usual, until it was time to jump into the family beach wagon and hurry off to pick up Mr. and Mrs. Blake, who were on the late afternoon train from town . . .

Others at the ringside were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Judkins of Cambridge, Mrs. Fred Cullen with two of her daughters, Peggy and Lee, Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Royden Loring, Frances Williams, and Jane Bancroft . . .

Battle scarred veterans are always heroes of a sports arena . . . A football player who comes limping into the stadium of his Alma Mater . . . or a polo player hobbling along on crutches . . . is immediately lionized by admiring friends . . .

At almost every horse show there is an admiring and sympathetic group surrounding some rider who came a cropper the day before and bears the scars of battle . . . but on this score . . . and through no fault of her own . . . Anne Whipple is a little bit of a false alarm . . . Yesterday she performed her program selling with only one hand . . . for her right arm was in a sling, because of an injury, which, she explained to friends, was not the result of a nasty spill at a difficult jump, but rather a slip while she was performing the prosaic task of opening a window at her home . . .

Anne wore a very becoming frock of American Beauty rose linen with large bone buttons down the back and a crocheted white fez on her blonde curls . . .

Dance Features Race Week Program

THE FIRING of the little brass cannon at the end of the Eastern Yacht Club wharf usually marks the end of the yachtsman's day . . . but yesterday, though it marked the conclusion of the day's races, it also served to announce the beginning of festivities for the annual Race Week dance . . . the most lavish affair of the summer season at the Eastern Yacht Club . . .

A number of Cohasset sailorettes, whom we have missed at the horse show, turned up at the Eastern in anything but the sturdy sailing togs they have practically lived in all week . . . Though Frannie McElwain's horse took the jumps in the horse show . . . she was not there to ride or see the performance . . . figuring, probably, that there are plenty of horse shows all through the year, but only one chance to compete in the Race Week regatta at Marblehead . . .

Mrs. George Van Antwerp was a girlish little figure in pale blue organdie with a short pink cape and pink sash . . . as she whirled around in a party of dancers which included her twin, Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall Tuckerman, Jr., and Mrs. Van Antwerp's daughter, Mimi . . . the latter wore her French blue taffeta bridesmaid frock and was conversing so seriously with her boy friend that she didn't let the newness of the dress prevent her from sitting out on the dock to watch the hazy moon riding low over the picturesque harbor . . .

Mrs. Charles Hovey and Mrs. James C. Gray, Jr., both chose filmy gray frocks for their dancing . . . while Mrs. B. Devereux Barker, Jr.'s, zebra-striped black and white taffeta was a bit more startling and conspicuous . . . Nancy Leiter's blue sailing dungarees gave way temporarily to a feminine creation of pink and white . . . and Bunty Emerson wore a pleated chiffon with yards of material in the skirt . . . It is white with clusters of red, purple and green blossoms printed here and there . . .

Eddie Fay was there, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Wallie Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Terry, Mrs. John O'Day, Jean Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. John Wooldredge, Mr. and Mrs. Gifford K. Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hunneman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Plimpton and Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Shrigley . . .

HORSE SHOW THRILLS THE YOUNG SET

LEE HYDE MARY C. MORRISON

THE PHOTOGRAPHER'S usual "Smile, please," didn't work on Lee Hyde or Mary C. Morrison at the Cohasset Horse Show yesterday afternoon, for they were giving all their attention to some of the finer points of horsemanship. Miss Hyde is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Stanley Hyde of Duxbury and Miss Morrison, who hails from St. Louis, is spending the month of August with her aunt, Mrs. Frederick E. Rice of Cohasset.

Aristos Club to Sponsor Many Exciting Events

Tremendously interesting and exciting are the plans Aristos Club has made for the coming season.

Formation of a little theater group, plans for a club chorus, incorporation of fencing into the program are only a few ideas being included in next year's calendar under the leadership of its new president, Mildred Collins of Arlington.

Presentation of amusing skits for shut-ins is the purpose of the formation of the thespian group. Dolores Newman of Arlington will direct the monthly musical program. Mary Doyle is head of the choral group.

Chairman of the fencing group is Louise Duffy, who will enlist the club girls taking up the sport at the Harvard Fencing Salon.

EXPAND HOSPITAL WORK

Kathleen Donahue of Somerville will chairman the reception committee at club get-togethers. Helen Doherty and Louise Hadley are undertaking the expansion of the club's hospital work.

Assisting Miss Collins with the formation of these novel plans is a new group of officers, Ada Moriarty of Medford, first vice-president; Sadie Kelly of Watertown, second vice-president, Catherine Erwin of Braintree, secretary, and Charlotte O'Donnell of Medford.

Returning from their vacations to take an active part in the club calendar are Alice Clem of Norwood, Eleanor Cummings of Dorchester and Grace Donahue of Somerville, who vacationed at Martha's Vineyard.

CLUB GIRLS ACTIVE

Other active Aristos girls who will serve on the executive board are Cecelia Galvin of Roxbury, Mary Granahan of Brighton, Frances Harrington of Somerville, Eileen Kiley of Somerville and Catherine Lee of Dorchester.

Billie Millar will return from her summer vacation in Falmouth to chairman the courtesies committee, which Mrs. Francis Seerey of Arlington is coming back from a season in Chatham to assume chairmanship of the communion breakfast, the first Sunday in October.

Assisting her are Alice Pinkham and Eleanor Cummings.

* * *

Cape Cod, White Mountains and Maine resorts figure in the Aristos Club vacation news. Mary Daly is summering at Marion. Agnes Mulcahy has been swimming and playing tennis at Alton Bay, N. H. and Gertrude Meaney spent a fortnight at Oak Corners, Center Harbor, N. H.

GUESTS AT MAGNOLIA

As house guests, Vivian Lennon is entertaining Catherine Lee and Catherine Sullivan at her summer home in Magnolia. Mrs. Edward Tivan, the former Mary O'Neill is vacationing at Hampton Beach and Phyllis Proetzchner is holidaying at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

Society Notes

FOSTER SKILLMAN was host to a small group of friends at luncheon the other day at his farm at Lamoine, Me. His guests included Mrs. Upton Sullivan, Frank Hale and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton.

Keep Atlas on Hand

NEWS breaks—now here, now there.

To keep on your toes and mix in the conversation, see in your atlas where the excitement is stirring.

"Railway Income Up." Activity for Chicago, the greatest railway center in the world. Easy to see why. Chicago's so close to the center of population of the United States. To be more precise the population center is a little southeast of Terre Haute, Indiana, slowly moving westward year by year.

"Russia and Japan." Recent interest centered on the Amur River. See, it forms the curved boundary line between Manchukuo and Russia.

"Production Gains" the headlines say. To get the lay of the land look up the great manufacturing states. New York's first from the standpoint of value of production. Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, and New Jersey follow close behind.

While you're looking at the map, look at inland Montana, miles away from the Pacific coast. Ever notice that a generous slice of Montana is west of part of California, a seaboard state?

And by the way, which is the west end of the Panama Canal, the Atlantic side or the Pacific side? The Atlantic side, strangely enough.

Bridge

Four-Four Fit

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In the hand below the solid spade suit would not have produced a slam, whereas careful play brought home the slam in diamonds.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North:
♠ K Q J 8 4
♡ J 9
♢ Q 8 7 4
♣ A 8

West:
♠ 9 6 5
♡ 8 3
♢ J 6 3 2
♣ K Q 9 4

East:
♠ 10 3 2
♡ A 7 6 2
♢ 9
♣ J 10 7 5 3

South:
♠ A 7
♡ K Q 10 5 4
♢ A K 10 5
♣ 6 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♢	Pass	4 ♢	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♢	Pass	Pass	Pass

The basis for North's four diamond bid (which paved the way to the slam) was the fact that he himself had much better than an opening bid, together with a good fit in his partner's suit. He was perfectly willing therefore to go past the three no-trump level, knowing that at worst the partnership would be safe at game in a major, or even at diamonds.

West opened the King of clubs, dummy winning with the Ace. The hand looked easy at first, since a trump break would permit declarer to draw three rounds of trumps, run the spades to discard his club, and then knock out the Ace of hearts.

But when South laid down the Ace of diamonds East's play of the nine-spot gave him pause. His normal insurance against four to the Jack would have been to take the second trick with dummy's Queen. But the play of the nine indicated that West rather than East was likely to have four trumps. The second trump trick was therefore taken with declarer's King. East discarded, and South congratulated himself on his acumen. His difficulties, however, were not yet over.

He did not draw trumps, for eventually the Ace of hearts would have to be knocked out and then the opponents would take a club trick. South ran three rounds of spades, discarding his losing club. Fortunately for him, both East and West followed to the three rounds of spades.

Only then could the Ace of hearts be knocked out. When East took his Ace of hearts he returned a club, South trumping with the ten. The five of trumps was then led, dummy finessing the Queen-8 and drawing trumps. Declarer then easily took the rest.

Tuberculosis Discussed

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

I AM often asked whether it is safe for children to live in a house where there is tuberculosis. This is a difficult question to answer, because "it all depends!"

Under some circumstances it may be safe for the child to remain at home but, if certain precautions are not taken, that course is decidedly dangerous.

There is always danger that a youngster, in constant company with a tubercular adult, may contract the disease. This is particularly the case if the adult has a cough or expectorates mucus which might contain the germs of tuberculosis. Children are very susceptible to infection with these germs. It is extremely unwise for them to spend time in a room with one who has active tuberculosis.

One who has such germs in the sputum is a menace to all with whom he comes in contact. This is especially true of the children as I have said. They have not as yet built up an "immunity" or natural resistance to the disease. As they grow older, the danger is less.

I am often asked, too, whether it is safe for a child to visit a parent or other relative who is a patient in a sanitarium. The modern establishment for those having this disease is run by officials who know exactly how to make it safe.

For this reason, it is safe to allow a youngster to visit his parent at a sanitarium. There must be no kissing, of course. Intimate association must be avoided.

But if the body is too weak to react and the infection persists, the disease progresses and it is not long before general tuberculosis is present. Even with recovery there may be a re-infection. This may occur at any time during life. Its dangers are especially great in the two extremes, childhood and late adult life.

Children who have been exposed to tuberculosis by contact with an infected parent or relative should be kept under observation.

Famous Illinois Educator Dies

Jacksonville, Ill., Aug. 13 (AP)—Illinois educators mourned today the death of Dr. Mark E. Penney, 56, director of the State Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and former president of James Millikin University at Decatur.

He died at a sanitarium yesterday after a two months' illness with a heart ailment. Dr. Penney was university president from 1924 to 1930. He was given a degree on theology from Boston University.

Should a Girl Refuse To Participate in Petting Party?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

To pet or not to pet—that is the question, as Hamlet did not say.

No two persons seem to hold exactly the same point of view on this important and timely subject. Each has his own opinion.

For instance, a week ago John D., a frequent correspondent, wrote that he wouldn't think of taking a girl out the second time unless she waxed just a bit affectionate.

Then there was Vera, who replied that young men who expected girls to pay for dates with kisses had no place in her life.

Finally, Martha K. wrote from Melrose to inquire:

"Isn't this a modern age? Why must young women act as their grandmothers did? Prudishness went out with hoop-skirts. Most girls today know how to conduct themselves, even in the company of the most confirmed 'petters.'"

I thought that I had heard about all that it was possible to hear about kissing, but I was wrong. And the proof is in this interesting letter, which I offer for your perusal:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I believe an occasional kiss, or a little harmless petting, enhances any date. But my girl friend is painfully averse to this.

"She likes me, and we always have a fairly good time together, but her attitude about kissing bothers me.

"Naturally, she's very reserved and modest. Does that account for it? Or is it that some girls don't enjoy that sort of thing and don't believe it proper?

"Am I wrong in thinking her attitude an unnatural one?

"Do you think I ought to speak to her about it, or just wait patiently? CONSCIENTIOUS."

DEAR FRIEND:

As you say, kisses may improve a date. But it is still my belief that the girl who does not submit too readily to the affection of a young man is the winner in the matrimonial race.

You ought to know that promiscuous kissing does not appeal to the fastidious, either boy or girl. Modesty still pays. So it will always be my advice to refrain from petting until you realize, positively that you have serious intentions in the direction of marriage.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For a number of years I have been a reader of your column, and would like to have you tell me if I am hopelessly old-fashioned when I say that a well-brought up girl of 16 should be in her home and in bed before 4 o'clock in the morning.

Where do young people go until that hour? Please tell me.

And is it customary for young people from good homes to keep such hours?

And shouldn't a parent be able to say when a girl of 16 should be at home and in bed?

A GRANDMOTHER.

DEAR FRIEND:

Four A. M. seems a pretty emancipated hour for a girl of 16 to return home.

If there were any reason for this early-bird appearance at the parental roof, such as attending a dance at some distance and motor trouble on the way home, it might be overlooked, but coming in often at about the time the morning milk is delivered seems to me unfortunate hour for sweet sixteen.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My sister was the brilliant one in our family of four. After we were through high school she was sent to one of the best women's colleges in the country, and made good in her profession.

When she was 28 years old she married a man none of us thought very much of. He had been a good deal of a failure in two positions, and was starting on a third when sister married him.

He hasn't done well in that either, and the rest of us are distinctly tired of helping them out.

Sister has tried to get employment, but has never been successful, which we think is due to the fact that she's terribly superior, not to say "snooty," about taking a job that she doesn't consider worthy of her education.

But she's not too proud to be helped by her family, all of whom are working. GRACE K.

DEAR GRACE:

If the facts are as related in your letter, and Sister declines to take jobs because she feels they're not in keeping with her education, it might not be a bad idea to let her go without the family loans for a while.

Her husband, to whom she is so devoted, seems to rate as a luxury, and one has to work to support luxuries, unless they're inherited, which is not true of husbands.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH YOUR THROATLINE?

By IDA JEAN KAIN

MAKEUP may cover a multitude of skins, as the inimitable Eddie Cantor puts it, but not even the magic of makeup can minimize a double chin.

The chinline tells an actress' age in headlines . . . and no glamour girl is going to let her chin double-cross her.

That clear-cut line of the throat adds immeasurably to the youth of an actress.

The lovely Grace Moore, whose youthful throatline is one of her best features, has her own way of keeping those molded contours. She rocks the knuckles of her clenched fists up the column of the throat, and on up to the temples. This massage won't give you a glorious voice like Miss Moore's, but it will help you to a cameo-clear line of throat and jaw.

Singers, as a rule, have young throats. They not only put their throat muscles to vigorous use, but they carry their heads beautifully. Standing tall, with head held high, is excellent throat exercise.

Bette Davis is the perfect example of what posture can do for the throatline. Just recently Miss Davis was cited as having the most aristocratic throat in Hollywood. Notice the regal carriage of her head! Miss Davis never allows her head to tip forward in reading—as you and I do—but, rather, holds the book up on a level with her eyes.

More than anything else, posture determines the line of the throat. Permitting the head to poke forward stretches the delicate muscles under the chin and fosters a sagging, aged line.

Corrective throat exercises should begin at 30, for at that age you can prevent these telltale signs of neglect. It is never too late, however, to do something toward erasing wrinkles and firming a flabby throat.

* * *

Begin your throat beauty program with this easy-to-do exercise:

Sit in a straight-backed chair, with the small of the back and the shoulders flat against the chair back. Tilt the head back until you are looking at the ceiling, and then roll the head from one shoulder to the other, slowly. Now, sit up tall in the chair and, with head held high, point the chin over one shoulder and then the other. Do not lower the tip of the chin. You must keep chin and head high to benefit from this exercise.

In Hollywood, the fashion and hair designers devise ways of creating the illusion of those breathtakingly beautiful throatlines. Here are some tips from them:

If your throat is short, wear a V-neck dress, low in front, and the hair swept from the ears. If you have a long neck, avoid the V-neckline, and wear dresses that come up high. Let the hair fall in a long bob to cut the length of the throatline.

Protect your throatline with daily exercise. Send for the leaflet, "Let's Chin Awhile." Enclose stamped, addressed envelope along with your request to Miss Ida Jean Kain, in care of this paper.

There's Always Tomorrow

CHAPTER 17

Whichever way one looked at it, it was like dancing on the edge of a volcano!

Bits of conversation between herself and the handsome man from Kentucky floated through her mind.

He had quizzed her about Paris. Her family. Surely she had relatives in the gay capital of France? Why, he was almost certain he had seen her at the Crillon, Les Ambassadeurs, or was it the Ritz? His voice was ironic.

Boldly daring, she had met him on his own ground.

"All three, no doubt. But I don't care for Paris, really. I was much more attached to my old chateau on the Loire."

A CHALLENGE

"Came down through the generations in your family, marquise?" he had challenged her.

His dark eyes had flicked her. There was an icy coolness in them. It had angered her. Anger mixed with the role she had to play, wove a neat tissue of fibs.

"Now I have it," he said triumphantly. "The first time I saw you was at the Duchess de Nemours' ball. She's a charming Frenchwoman, isn't she? I'm referring to the young duchess, naturally."

"A charming Frenchwoman," repeated [illegible]

His dark eyes [illegible]. An amusing ironical gleam lay in their depths. [illegible] as a matter of fact. Born Peggy Watson. A sweet girl."

"I was thinking of her mother-in-law," said Toni quickly. He was [illegible]. She wished with all her heart that she were [illegible] and with a certain [illegible] he could not but admire.

"For the past several years, I have led a ver-ree quiet life, monsieur. I am the last of my family. And quite without money to attend the gay parties of Paris, or mingle with the rich Americans, such as yourself."

He thought: "She has courage. Maybe there is some truth in her story? Maybe that vile Niklas did find her abroad?"

But sooner or later he veered round to quizzing her on subjects that a French marquise, however poor, would surely be acquainted with if she were the real article.

Toni learned how to parry [illegible]

"I have passed most of my life in the convent, monsieur."

"Perhaps you thought you had a vacation? Forgive me, but for anyone as charming, as lovely, would surely be a mistake."

SHREWD FALSEHOOD

The ironical note again. He had not really meant to flatter her, though the words sounded like that.

"I was at school, monsieur, absorbed in my studies."

"Until recently?"

"Yes. The times you think you saw me in the fashionable hotels of Paris, I was with my aunt. She is dead now. She lived in Paris. She wished that I stay with her during my holidays from the convent."

"Then, surely," he baited, "you stayed at school considerably longer than most pupils."

A flush rose under her delicate make-up.

"I am only twenty-two. Or is twenty-two old in your America?"

"No. Nor is twenty-five."

He had guessed her age. But Niklas had insisted on lopping at least three years from it. She returned his look with the challenge. "Is it considered polite to discuss a lady's age in your South?"

He laughed. [illegible]

"You see, marquise, everything about you interests me. You lead such a fascinating life."

Again those innuendoes! How [illegible]

"Your old chateau on the Loire—is it sold?"

"Naturellement. Have I not told you that my family lost everything? So how could I, just out of the convent and trained for no profession but that of singing, keep up a place that required repairs, servants, constant expense?"

"I see."

"You see nothing, monsieur, beyond your own fortunate existence." She was angry.

"I am surprised that anyone so—shall I say lucky?—would waste his valuable time in talking, questioning some one who is now nothing but a night-club entertainer."

TO WHAT END

[illegible] bowed. "I deserve the rebuke. I was unwarrantedly impertinent. But the fact remains that you interest me enormously."

"To what end?"

[illegible] Might [illegible] of meaning [illegible] The most obvious [illegible] would he know his [illegible] toward her?

[illegible] to counteract this impression she gave a nonchalant [illegible]

[illegible] been able to read his [illegible] at this moment she would [illegible] surprised. [illegible] in fact.

"To what end?" he was [illegible] were that [illegible]

[illegible] sent her a [illegible] of white orchids as though to make amends. His card with a line of apology in French and his good wishes lay in the big square box awaiting her arrival at the club.

After a moment's indecision she had worn the orchids. They curled in waxed beauty under her ear.

But before the evening was over she [illegible]. It was as though [illegible] the flowers.

Now as she sat [illegible]

The head waiter, Diaz, came [illegible]

"Madame la Marquise, the doorkeeper informs me there is a gentleman to see you. Here is his card. I informed him that you can not be disturbed, but he still waits."

Before even glancing at the card Toni sensed that it was Brock.

"Send him in, Diaz," she said. "I'll see him."

Best to have it out now.

A somewhat shamefaced Brock appeared.

"It's awfully decent of you receiving me, Toni. I know I must have made a nuisance of myself last night, though I don't remember the half of it, honest."

BROCK CONFESSES

"Sit down." Her voice was toneless.

"How did you happen to come here last night?" she demanded. She asked the question even though she doubted he would tell the truth.

"I've been making the rounds for the past week, ever since I hit the city." He grinned sheepishly. "Had a bit of a smack in the eye out West, y'understand. Jessica leaving me so suddenly, and all."

[illegible] He meant that he had [illegible] cared for Jessica [illegible] That was what [illegible]

"We quarreled. She's mighty hard to get along with, Toni. Not half as sweet as you were. Gosh, I've been a cad!"

Toni remained silent.

"Things were too stirred up in San Francisco, the gossip and all. So I beat it to New York."

"Just as I did," Toni thought, ironically.

"But our manner of meeting our humiliations was somewhat different, that's all. Brock gets drunk, while I wear out shoe leather, job hunting. Now when I've landed something good, he comes here to spoil it! But he shan't! I won't let him!"

Brock was talking again. As Toni watched his [illegible] face, [illegible] eyes that [illegible]

"I asked the clerk at my hotel about the liveliest spot in town. You wouldn't blame me, Toni, if you knew what a time I've passed through. Among others he told me of this club, and so last night I dropped in."

"How," she inquired icily, "did you get past the doorman? Only members are admitted."

Some of his old swagger came back to him as he grinned. "Oh, I pushed in with the crowd. There was only one empty table. I headed for it."

She thought ironically: "My table."

A BITTER REBUKE

"I was clean bowled over when I spotted you in that fancy rig out. You're sure smart, Toni. Don't you think we'd make a good team here in New York? Eh, what?"

Dressing Table---Lipstick Size!

Ideal When Traveling; It's New

By ARLINE GOULD

WE'RE all for having a remarkable gadget or two in the bottom of the handbag to be rummaged up and shown off at convenient times . . . something like a diamond-studded watch and lipstick combination.

But as long as we can't have that, we'll take the next best thing—the exciting and clever new "kitstick!"

The Chinese didn't think of it, though they're probably furiously sorry and envious.

Besides being cute to see and intriguing to wave under friends' noses, it does away with that grab-bag atmosphere, for in it is everything you need for a quick clean-up and fresh make-up!

No fooling, all the way to eye shadow!

• • •

Amazing isn't the word for it. You may be as remote and unemotional and un-dithering as we are, but you, too, will lose all those reticences when you see the kitstick.

[illegible] as you'll see by the photograph next to this story. It's all taken apart there with the size of each compartment clearly visible.

This is how it goes. It's red, white and blue for practical as well as decorative purposes. Just like an ordinary lipstick.

Unscrew the colored sections one by one, and you find: Topmost, the red compartment with cream rouge for lips and cheeks. There's Flame, and Light for coral-lips, or Poppy.

A bit bigger is the white compartment with cleansing cream.

Blue indicates a silk finish powder base that's flesh-tinted.

And the base unscrews to show eye shadow, violet, green or blue!

• • •

We've tried out not a few quick clean-up affairs that go into the handbag, but the rummaging and gathering together of small articles for the job was not exactly a success. This business of [illegible] in for one plum seems like the real thing, at [illegible]

For [illegible] information on [illegible] compact [illegible] for [illegible] Beauty [illegible] LIBerty 4000 week [illegible], five, or write her at the Boston Evening American [illegible] a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

A PASTEL cream complexion base that miraculously has none of the familiar pore-stuffing ingredients is the discovery Miss Arline Gould will tell of in her Monday column.

September Bridal

News of approaching September weddings is coming so thick and fast that it seems September is ready to challenge June's monopoly on having the most marriages. Another September wedding just added to the list is that of Miss Sarah Preston Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Taylor Foster of New York and A. Oram Fulton, Jr., of Boston.

The ceremony will be performed in Christ Episcopal Church in New York on Saturday, September 18. The Rev. Albert J. M. Wilson, rector of the church, and the Rev. Dr. George St. John of Choate School will jointly officiate.

Mrs. R. James Foster, sister-in-law of the bride-to-be, will be the matron of honor, and Miss Barbara Fulton, sister of the bridegroom, the maid of honor. The list of bridesmaids includes Sally Coe of Worcester, Electra Brush, Elizabeth Martin and Eleanor Whitman, all of Greenwich, Ct.; Mary Linen of Waverly, Pa., and Phoebe Goodhue of Hewlett, Long Island.

John Fulton will act as his brother's best man, and the names of the ushers are to be announced later.

Miss Foster attended Greenwich Academy, graduated from Miss Hall's School in Pittsfield last year and made her debut the following September.

4th MOTHER, DAUGHTER OF SERIES

SCREEN PLAY HERE TODAY

Mothers are proud of their daughters and the daughters think the world of "ma."

This mutual respect and love is vividly portrayed in many instances in pictures taken of mother and daughter together.

In recognition of the intrinsic value of these pictures, the Boston Evening American is offering cash prizes of $50 for outstanding mother-daughter photographs.

The prize picture of the day—five days comprise the contest—will win $10 for the person who sent it in.

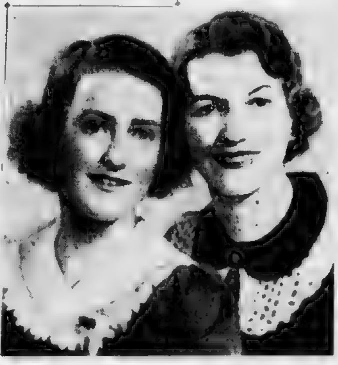
Besides the cash prize, the five next best pictures submitted every day will each be awarded a pair of tickets to the film, "Stella Dallas," which opened today at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters.

The fourth cash prize of the contest was won by Phyllis Keller, 12, of 67 Montcalm avenue, Brighton, who sent in a photograph of herself with her mother, Mrs. Madeline Keller.

Expensive pictures are not required. Just send in simple ones which are easy to reproduce. Snapshots will do. If you wish the pictures returned please send the same amount of postage as was required to mail them to the Stella Dallas Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Portraying the story of a mother and daughter parted by social barriers, "Stella Dallas" is a Samuel Goldwyn production featuring Barbara Stanwyck, assisted by Anne Shirley.

The five other winners are Miss Dorothy [illegible], Chester street, Lawrence; Miss Ruth A[illegible], 56 Hyde Park avenue, Roslindale; Mrs. Carrie [illegible], 474 Chatham street, Lynn; Mrs. O[illegible] Etienne, 176 Harvard street, Wollaston, and Mrs. Louise Clark, 27 Edmund road, Arlington.



PHYLLIS KELLER MRS. MADELINE KELLER

Fourth—and next to the last—of the $10 awards being given by the Boston Evening American for mother-and-daughter photographs goes to Mrs. Madeline Keller and 12-year-old Phyllis Keller, for the picture shown above. The Kellers live in Montcalm avenue, Brighton. Final $10 prize will be given tomorrow. Collaborating in sponsorship of the contest are Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters, now showing the mother-love screen hit, "Stella Dallas," a Samuel Goldwyn production.

M. D. C. Will Hold Walk on Sunday

Nature enthusiasts in Greater Boston are invited to join Edward L. Farrell and his instructors on Sunday afternoon in the Ponkapoag section of the Blue Hills reservation to choose suitable sites for bird houses according to Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman of the Metropolitan District Commission.

Harry George Higbee, naturalist, starting at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday will lead the trip through the Ponkapoag section. The group will meet at the refectory near Houghtons Pond.

J. J. SULLIVAN CAUGHT, FACES NEW CHARGES

Wanted since he made a dramatic escape from Woburn District Court almost a year ago, John J. "Mustache" Sullivan, alleged confidence man, was held by state detectives here today on two charges of larceny and one charge of unlawful possession of narcotics.

Two detectives, Sergeant Theodore W. [illegible] and Joseph [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] bridge.

About to enter his [illegible] Sullivan was seized and served with warrants charging larcenies in Marblehead and Cambridge.

He will be taken to Plymouth County jail on the narcotics charge, state police said, while other charges will probably be preferred later.

[illegible] at the time of his escape [illegible] September, [illegible] was being arraigned for [illegible] swindle [illegible] [illegible] throughout the state [illegible] [illegible] campaign funds.

Father Absolved In Appendicitis Death of Son

Charles Bergeron, of Summer street, Lynn, World War veteran accused of criminal negligence in the death of his 10-year-old son, Charles Jr., on July 20, has been absolved of all culpability, Police Chief James H. Broad revealed today.

Exhibiting an official notice received from District Attorney Hugh Cregg, Chief Broad stated that the district attorney determined that the facts surrounding the boy's death did not warrant bringing charges against the father after reviewing a report made by Inspectors Charles Duggan and Otis Lyons.

Advised to send his son to the hospital for an appendix operation, Bergeron instead took the boy out for a walk.

Later the boy was rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation without his father's permission while Bergeron, Sr., was booked at police headquarters on a drunkenness charge.

The boy died shortly after leaving the operating table.

Spiders Gain in Snake Fight

Hornell, N. Y., Aug. 13 (INS)—The battle between spiders and a dark brown snake trapped in their web in the cellar of a house here continued today with odds favoring the spiders to win.

The curiosity of man, however, threatened to prolong the battle.

The spiders have become alarmed over the presence of sightseers and do little of their deadly spinning before human beings.

The spiders' scent victory in that they have the snake's neck firmly noosed with one strand and are gradually pulling it taught as they slowly raise the reptile into the air.

R. J. Holden, in whose home the drama began 11 days ago, said today he would not release the snake, believing it is a part of nature's drama.

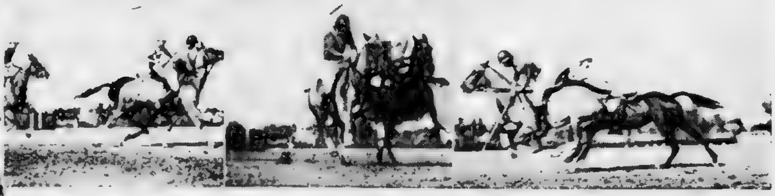
DID YOU SAY Action?



THERE'S PLENTY DOING when Bob Bullock's in the game! Follow him up the field. He's wearing the dark shirt in these pictures. Bob's one of the great No. 1s of polo—plays this key position as it should be played—with strategy, skill, and courage!

RIGHT ON THE NOSE! Consistent, accurate hitting makes Bob Bullock a dangerous scoring threat. Above, he rides an opponent out of play—at the same time makes a well-timed shot to the uprights at such blinding speed that even a fast-action camera catches the ball only as an egg-shaped blur!

CLOSE QUARTERS! Bullock is famous as a hard-riding defense player too. Above, he's playing to retrieve possession of the ball for his side. Like Lou Gehrig (the Iron Man of Baseball), Lenore Kight Wingard (America's Premiere Speed-Swimmer), and Glenn Hardin (World's Champion Hurdler), Bob Bullock has a decided preference for the extra smoking pleasure that Camels bring him. He's smoked Camels for over a decade.

WATCHING Helen Howard, one of America's most graceful divers, you realize what healthy nerves mean to a diver. Does she smoke? "Of course," Helen says. "I smoke as many Camels as I please. They're so mild."

CAPT. BILL HATCH, deep sea fishing skipper, gives one of his reasons for preferring Camels. He says: "After a tough fight with a big one, when I feel tired, I get a 'lift' in energy with a Camel."

Naturally Bob Bullock Appreciates Mild Smoking

POLO enthusiasts will agree with Mr. Bullock that it takes healthy nerves to play polo—nerves that don't fail in a pinch. Bob Bullock says: "Camels deserve the blue ribbon for mildness and mellowness. I've smoked Camels for years. They never jangle my nerves!"

Mealtime (right) finds Bob, as usual, enjoying Camels—for digestion's sake. "Camels at mealtimes and afterwards add a world of enjoyment to eating," he says. "'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

For unvarying mildness, flavor, and fragrance—make it Camels! Camel's costlier tobaccos are naturally mild and fine-flavored.

AUCTIONEER. "I work at a tense pace," says John M. Mitchell. "Jittery nerves? Not me! My cigarette never gets on my nerves. It's Camel, of course. My throat is very important to me. Camels don't irritate my throat."

NO JANGLED NERVES for this busy secretary. Miss Rosamond Morse says: "I can't afford jangled nerves. That's why I prefer a milder cigarette—Camels. I've smoked Camels for years. They never jangle my nerves."

Seems to me that the one thing extra needful to make the summer vacation trade complete here in New England is a sea-serpent!

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The New England Council has been issuing a lot of optimistic publicity this month, telling us how crowded we are with visitors from elsewhere, prophesying that the total of the 1937 tourist trade ought to run to a million or so above anything we have taken in at the box office during previous summers, and intimating that if we keep on our toes, in spite of the hot weather, we ought to be able to make a very good thing out of our natural resources. Amen!

Nevertheless, we could do with a sea-serpent. Other places have them. Why not the New England coast from Buzzards Bay to Quoddy? An occasional item about a sand shark, however well it may read doctored up by the skillful and poetic local correspondent from East Alewife, is hardly the same thing.

Loch Ness 'Serpent' Doing Five-a-Day for the Tourists

Loch Ness, Scotland, has a famous one, of course. For years it has been doing a five-a-day in its lair to the edification of hordes of trippers and the permanent residents. Excursion trains are run to it scheduled to arrive at its timed appearances. I gather it is more or less like "old faithful."

Maybe the excursion trains run along the edge of its "ness" much like the boat race trains at New London. They have even built a hotel for the serious icthyologists. Or—what's the Latin for sea-serpent?

Vancouver, on the line between Canada and this country, has one. Even the Shetland Islands came to bat with a splendid specimen "30 feet long, with a dorsal fin six feet high and a habit of puffing like a freight train."

And now the Nantucket Inquirer and Mirror, that famous sheet whose pages are so large that a bill-poster might yearn to get to work upon them, headlines an account by one Bill Manville which has about it the ring of truth slightly mixed with poetry.

> "Believe it or not—I saw the thing with my own eyes about 9:30 this morning. It was about two miles offshore the Gauls and it was certainly not a whale. It must have been a mile away when I saw it. It was a great big creature with a terrible looking head which it seemed to raise 15 or 20 feet out of the water for a moment and then disappear. It looked greenish—a very strange shade of green."

Naturally it could not come any closer to shore, because if it did it would get stranded in shoal water like the black fish down at Dennis.

Why Should Nantucket Be So Favored by Providence?

Why Nantucket, that has notions about seceding from Massachusetts and even would like to get out of the United States, should be so favored by Providence I can't guess.

Boston hasn't seen a real, authentic, honest bona-fide sea-serpent since 1817—see "The Old Farmer's Almanac"—and that's too long.

The subject is nothing to laugh at. Even Rudyard Kipling, that sober and veracious observer, one hardly given to tergiversation and fantasy in these matters, saw one. He was on his way across the Pacific from India to San Francisco. There was some kind of a subterranean or submarine disturbance and the sea gave up its dead. Something hidden for aeons on the bed of the ocean was thrown up to the surface and thrashed about feebly in its dying throes and then sank from sight. But R. K. saw it. He says so. You can read about it in the little book, "Abaft the Funnel," a fairly recent reprint of stuff written back in the nineties.

Why Not Put Beebe on Job? A Town's Fortune Could Be Made

What is William Beebe doing these days? Why doesn't the New England Council hire him and his bathysphere and put him to work up and down our coasts hunting for a specimen? It may be objected that the sight of one might scare off the thousands who have come to New England to spend millions.

Nonsense! Whatever fortunate little town by river or seashore (Keats) can get on the front page with a live authentic sea-serpent, that little town's fortune is made—probably for years. Why, the pop and hot dog concessions alone would be worth a fortune. Auto camps would spring up like mushrooms. There would be sea-serpent excursion specials on Sundays.

Let the New England Council wake up and get busy about it!

1 Hour's Freedom Daily Asked for Aged Spinster

Salem, Aug. 13—An attempt to release Miss Mary McCarriston, 74-year-old jailed Lynn spinster, from her prison confines for at least an hour a day in order that [illegible] of her health [illegible] was announced today.

The aged woman was remanded to Salem jail for contempt of court when she failed to produce $12,000 left her in a will by Mrs. Mary Davis, which was subsequently broken by a niece.

Attorney Alphonse F. McCarthy, who with Representative George J. O'Shea has interested himself in the case, announced he would ask Sheriff Frank E. Raymond to free Miss McCarriston in his custody daily so she might get some fresh air and a change of atmosphere.

Meanwhile McCarthy and O'Shea visited Lynn bankers and procured exact figures on the [illegible] held Miss McCarriston and Mrs. Davis, and declared they had receipts to show the entire bequest had been spent and could not be produced.

They planned to confer with Judge Edward B. O'Brien, who sent Miss McCarriston to jail, in an effort to obtain her permanent release.

The [illegible] local [illegible] of the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO affiliate, met last [illegible] and voted to send a [illegible] to the jail [illegible] for the [illegible] woman.

Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] Horgan, both of Lynn, representing 50 Democratic women, carried fruits and foods to Miss McCarriston in her cell yesterday.

GRACE SPRING

DORIS DANFORTH

Among the many girls whose photographs are being considered in the Boston Evening American-Keith Memorial Theater "Legs Like Dietrich's" contest, are those pictured here: Marion Roberts of Porter street, Malden, Barbara Secord of Marion road, Watertown; Grace Spring of Canton street, Boston, and Doris Danforth of Lynde street, Boston.

Cambridge Crash Injures 2 Men

Kenneth Engalls, 23, employe of Medfield state hospital, was pinned under a car and was suffering a possibly fractured skull following a collision between a taxi and a sedan at Memorial Drive and Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, early today.

The collision occurred at the Cambridge end of the Harvard bridge. The sedan in which Engalls was riding collided with a taxicab driven by William A. King, 25 Brookline street, Cambridge. King, suffering from a strained back, was held for treatment at Cambridge City Hospital with Engalls.

Lynn Woman Badly Injured by Auto

Mrs. Lena Durgan of Spencer street, Lynn, was confined at Chelsea Hospital [illegible] after being hit by [illegible] from a bus at [illegible] Circle, Revere.

She received a fractured left leg, a possible fracture of the pelvis and possible fracture of one rib. The driver of the car was John W. Burke of North street, Stoneham, police said.

Boston 5-Master Sails for Halifax

The five-masted schooner Edna Hoyt was [illegible] for Halifax, N. S., [illegible] out of Boston Harbor was [illegible] an unusual spectacle these days.

The Edna Hoyt is the only craft of her type in service anywhere. She was [illegible] downstream by the tug Edwin L. Pillsbury, and off Deer Island Light unfurled her sails and started eastward.

New Half-Fare Cruise Monday

The S.S. Steel Pier will carry hundreds of Boston Evening American readers and their families on another coupon excursion to Provincetown next Monday.

The coupon, which allows holders to purchase round trip tickets at half the usual fare, will appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of August 15.

The Steel Pier will sail promptly at 10 a. m. Monday, will cruise down the bay and stop for two hours at historic Provincetown. The Steel Pier will return to her Long Wharf dock at 7:45 p. m.

Many Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser readers take this trip once or twice each season.

Timilty's Vacation

Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty today was given permission by Governor Hurley to start his European vacation trip on September 15. Timilty's place will be filled by Superintendent Edward W. Fallon in his absence.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By

Ann Marsters

No one has ever been able to explain the mystery of child prodigies—the mystery of why some of them develop into ordinary men and women, while others fulfill the promise of genius.

ANN MARSTERS

The latest child prodigy is 13-year-old Katherine Carosso of Brooklyn, who has already published an amazing volume of poetry, and her second book will soon appear.

It is impossible to predict whether her talent is due to precocity or genius—but the marvel of it remains. She has written poems, seemingly, of experiences she has never had. And it must surely be genius that has given her such maturity of thought and style.

Just to give you an idea, here is the first and last verse of one of her poems entitled "Arabesque."

"I brook no monotone in life,
No idle hours;
I stride on edges of a knife,
And not on flowers.

* * *

I gather tirelessly a crop
Of word and line,
And filter each begotten drop
Like costly wine."

* * *

There's Still Hope for Junior, History of Genius Proves

If Katherine continues to grow in power her early poems of course will be locked upon as evidence of genius. Meanwhile, parents who would dearly love to have a genius in the family may remember that although Mozart was composing symphonies in "his high chair," Newton's teachers considered him to be a very ordinary child. So you see there's still hope for Junior.

A couple of days ago reporters called at Sinclair Lewis' home to interview his wife, Dorothy Thompson, about the rumor that she would be a candidate for the presidency in 1940. One asked Mr. Lewis what he thought of the idea.

"I'm very much for it," Lewis replied, "because, when she's elected and goes to the White House, I can syndicate a column called 'My Day—by Sinclair Lewis.'"

Warning to the Men Who Like to Pose for Pictures

Helen Hayes and Charlie MacArthur took a trip on a chartered yacht a while ago. In every port, the MacArthurs were swamped by requests for autographs and posings for pictures—because their captain would notify the natives in advance of their arrival.

In one town, despite the protests of the MacArthurs, the proud captain summoned newspapermen aboard to take a photograph.

When the picture was published it showed, standing behind the MacArthurs, the captain himself. This photo was seen by the captain's wife, who had him locked up—for desertion.

"Gone With the Wind" Might Be a Good Nite Club Name for It

Some time ago we printed a few translations of those puzzling words you find on menus. So here's a few more—which should help you to know what you're ordering without having to ask the waiter what's what. (You may know some of them already—but who hasn't been stumped once in a while?)

POTAGE: Soup.

RAVIGOTE: Green sauce made of mayonnaise, mustard, chopped eggs, herbs, anchovies.

RISSOLES: Pastry croquettes stuffed with meat and fried.

PUREE: Pulp or paste of vegetables or fruit.

SWEETBREADS: Thymus glands of calf and lamb.

RAGOUT: A stew, frequently made of sweetbreads and mushrooms.

VELOUTE: A smooth, cream sauce.

VOL AU VENT: A French patty made of puff paste. (It means, literally, flying with the wind.)

FLORENTINE EGGS: Eggs with spinach, grated cheese and cream.

RECHAUFFE: Warmed over.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

He was besieged all day for the "inside story" of the national outdoor contest which he attended with 15 other wing winners. This competition was held in Atlanta, Ga.

Maurice was one of hundreds of members who enjoyed the annual Birdmen cruise to and from Provincetown and a two-hour layover in that town.

Ace wing pins and cards were presented to the boys including Jack Golden, Melvin Wittenberg and Harold Crane.

Stephen Sardella, Sydney Wallerstein and Warren Avola also have received Ace wing pins, but due to summertime jobs were unable to attend the outing.

Maurice won fourth place in the R. O. G. cabin event.

Jim Lovett, Jr., 18-year-old Atlantan, won the William Randolph Hearst trophy, $250 in cash and the title of 1937 national outdoor model plane champion. He took first place in the stick event and third in both glider and cabin events, which gave him 200 points.

Henry Struck of New York, winner of a trophy and the second cash prize of $100, had 175 points, gained by a first in the cabin event and a second in the glider event.

Harold LaClaire of Detroit captured the third-place cash prize of $50 and a trophy with a first place in the glider event.

The best five times made in each of the three events, were as follows:

GLIDER EVENT

Harold LaClaire, 8 min. 32 sec.; Henry Struck, 6 min. 15 sec.; James Lovett, Jr., 3 min. 10 sec.; Willard Smits, Milwaukee, 1 min. 45 sec., and Walter March, Chicago, 1 min. 16 sec.

STICK EVENT

James Lovett, 5 min. 50 sec.; Martin Dotsko, Syracuse, 5 min. 3 sec.; Walter March, 4 min. 25 sec.; Eugene Fotkowski, Albany, 4 min. 18 sec., and Fred Mogart, Jr., Pittsburgh, 4 min. 10 sec.

CABIN EVENT

Henry Struck, 12 min., 14 sec.; Fred Mogart, 10 min., 50 sec.; James Lovett, 7 min., 34 sec.; Maurice Saidel, Boston, 5 min., 7 sec., and Eugene Kotkowski, 4 min., 43 sec.

The contest was followed by a banquet at which the chief trophy was presented, celebrities, including Dick Merrill and Jack Lamble, introduced and a world preview of the Monogram Picture, "Atlantic Flight," starring these air heroes, enjoyed.

Hartford Conn., Aug 13 (AP)—Only model airplanes powered by rubber bands may be flown legally in Connecticut, Charles L. Morris, state commissioner of aeronautics has ruled.

The regulation, Morris said, is directed against gasoline-powered models which he described as dangerous.

"They are completely beyond control once they leave the ground," Morris declared, "and they land when their gasoline gives out."

He stated such models have been known to damage property on the ground and to burn upon landing.

"Danger to house owners, as well as to automobiles and pedestrians on public highways, is becoming very apparent," the commissioner asserted.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

PRETTY and talented Jane Pickens of the radio realm is in town at the Metropolitan Theater to provide an eyeful for her fan following quite as she has afforded earfuls aplenty by way of a score or more of gala broadcasting productions.

Jane positively knocks the proverbial spots out of a false premise that prevailed not too long ago about "mike" people being often great to hear but not usually picturesque to gaze upon.

"N. F. T."

Movieland or the stage seldom produces a more attractive personality than this same Jane Pickens from the South. Her manner is ever charming, her voice is considered the last word and even the next word from the standpoint of appeal. Broadcasters apparently are accordingly seeking her services for numerous network [illegible] the New York and Hollywood [illegible] through the fall and winter ahead.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

[illegible] for this evening (WEEI) [illegible] the Hollywood Hotel [illegible] again between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Claire Trevor, Sally Blane and Douglas Fowley are ready and waiting [illegible] a mike version of their newest picture, called "One Mile from Heaven" with Judge Ben Lindsey also on hand to provide a part in it all. Harriet Parsons is handling the introductions and program supervision, while Louella Parsons, her mother, remains among the vacationists.

* * *

While the grand old game of baseball still holds the air audience attention, and most of all general public attention for that matter, the report of a "crucial" contest on the diamond and involving some program and other leading personalities of note, comes to hand.

This particular clash is scheduled for Sunday afternoon and should certainly be a savage struggle masked under the fair name of baseball. It will be described for listeners when "Bye's Prehistoric Sluggers" meet with Lowell Thomas and his "Nine Old Men" recruited in the World's Championship Baseball Game, or so-called.

The broadcast of the fray, which will feature the world's oldest players, will be made (WBZ) from Fancher's Field, Pound Ridge, N. Y., from 5:00 to 5:30 p. m.

During the description, many of the contestants will be brought to the microphone for brief interviews.

The encounter will bring the team members, men famous in varied fields of human endeavor, but not in baseball into conflict for the second time.

In a mid-July game the "Nine Old Men" defeated the "Sluggers" by a score of 15-6 leaving Bye's aggregation thirsting for revenge.

The lineup of the opposing camps of the team athletes includes such men of prominence in various walks of life as Gene Tunney, Deems Taylor, Frank (Bring 'em Back) Buck, Hendrik Willem Van Loon, Frank (Flier) Hawks, Lanny Ross, Stoopnagle and Bud, Lowell Thomas and others.

It is reported that Katharine Cornell will umpire and that a soft ball will be used.

IMPORTANT DATES

The return date for Jack Benny on WEAF-NBC has been set, it's October 3.

A month or so later his temporary enemy in broadcasting Fred Allen is expected to resume, also. A tentative time is November 17 depending upon how long Allen spends in Hollywood after his Maine vacation.

* * *

Both Andre Kostelanetz and Lily Pons consider Friday the 13th a lucky day, for this is the evening they will present their second concert in the Hollywood Bowl where last year they broke all previous attendance records, turning away an overflow crowd of many thousands.

An unusual orchestral feature of this year's concert will be Kostelanetz' presentation of William Walton's "Fantasy," one of the outstanding humorous works in the repertoire of modern composition which will be played for the first time in West Coast musical history.

The maestro will plane East following the Hollywood Bowl appearance to be in New York in time for rehearsals for his regular Wednesday evening broadcast next week.

BEES OPEN WITH DODGERS; SOX IN CAPITAL

YANKS Outhomered HERE

FANS APPLAUD SOX FIGHT

By JOE CASHMAN

Well, the Red Sox outhomered the Yanks anyway.

And now the courageous Croninmen are off for short series in Washington and Philadelphia, while the battling Bees return home to take on the Dodgers and Giants.

Contrary to the usual custom, neither club gets a day off as it shifts.

The McKechniemen open a four-game engagement with Brooklyn at the Hive this p. m. and the Fenway flock, at the same time will be playing in Washington.

Though there's a doubleheader already scheduled for [illegible] it probably wouldn't cause a [illegible] ing up on Gaffney's street [illegible] were to rain this afternoon.

BEES ROUT GIANTS

After the money and energy spent by New England fandom at the Fens the past [illegible] at least one day is [illegible] ate any great amount of baseball enthusiasm hereabouts.

The Swarm need [illegible] support during the [illegible] however, if it [illegible] equaling its [illegible] during its last home stand.

And the sweep of the two-game series with the Giants in New York indicates that the Boston athletes are primed to stage another of their thrilling spurts.

SOX STOP YANKS

It will be a long while before the recent Yanks-Sox warfare is forgotten.

The New Yorkers firing their heaviest artillery virtually cinched the pennant by taking three out of four and increasing their lead to 11½ games.

But the fight the Croninmen put up stamped them as the next best entry in the race and as the logical choice to win runner-up honors.

As valiant as were the Fenway favorites in the first double-header, when they came from behind to force the opening game to 14 innings and overcome a four-run lead before surrendering in the nightcap they were even more gallant in the Thursday twin [illegible]

They spotted the McCarthy murderers six runs in the opening tussle and then [illegible] the hostiles slugging thunder by pounding out a 16 to 10 triumph for the entertainment of 20,363 fans.

That triumph broke a ten-straight win streak by the Bronx battalion and the run total was the largest scored against the champions this year.

And in the nightcap, which finally found "Bump" Hadley beating Archie McKain, 5 to 3, the issue was in doubt right up to the final out.

OUTHOMER YANKS

Moreover, when the returns were all in and checked it was found as far as home-run hitting was concerned, the Sox had gained the edge.

The count was even, 2 to 2, the first day, but yesterday the natives pulled one ahead when Jimmy Foxx belted out a pair and Eric McNair and Joe Cronin collected one each against one each for Yanks' Joe DiMaggio, Myril Hoag and Tony Lazzeri.

Johnny Marcum was the victim of a six-run assault by the Yanks in the first three innings of the opener, and Rube Walberg was rushed in.

Then the natives went to work on Monte Pearson [illegible] bombardment against Frank Makosky so that the score was 6 [illegible] at the end of the fourth.

Walberg went wild and [illegible] two runs in the fifth only to have his mates score four markers to go one up in their half when Makosky went out and Spurgeon Chandler came in.

"Buck" Newsom, knocked out in the first frame of the Wednesday nightcap then became the Sox third pitcher and the Yanks tied the score in the sixth.

But "Buck" by permitting only one more run thereafter won in a breeze what with the natives helping on Kent "Lefty" Wieser for four runs in their sixth another in the seventh and two in the eighth.

YANKEES LUCKY

Jimmy Foxx accounted for the eighth-inning runs with his 3[illegible]th homer, the longest ever seen at the park. The ball cleared the barrier back of the bleacher end in left center below the flagpole.

"Double X" produced his second round-tripper of the day and the 1st of the year to put the Sox ahead 1 to 0 in the nightcap, but to no avail.

Joe DiMaggio, who has hit safely in last 21 consecutive games, fashioned homer No. 34 to break a 2-1 tie in the eighth and [illegible] Yanks manufactured [illegible] the ninth to offset [illegible] last-of-the-ninth four [illegible] only game of the [illegible] either starting pitcher [illegible] route.

Snow Shoes Favorite In Wonderland Derby

Eight Dogs Go to Post Tonight

They're off, at Wonderland, Revere, tonight in the season's biggest greyhound racing classic. It's the Wonderland Derby, and eight famous canine speedsters, all ex-champions, go to post.

The curtain falls on the summer season tomorrow with the Derby Consolation race the [illegible] event. This race on the au revoir card involves the eight greyhounds eliminated from the two Derby preliminaries.

The sensational little racing lady Snow Shoes owned by Benny Frisch, is one of the conspicuous entries in tonight's big event.

Because of her recent racing achievements there is every indication Snow Shoes will be one of the heavy backed favorites in the big event.

Tempest, the veteran speedster owned by [illegible] is an [illegible] able [illegible] the last time out, there is some question as to whether he can outrun [illegible] the race.

Commanding great attention will be Freda Koontz' [illegible] greyhound Extra, which [illegible] favorited [illegible] courses.

The field also includes Miss Lucky K, Deputy Garry, Madeline's Boy, Hazard Laddie and Fancy Jim.

The race is over the Revere course of 675 yards [illegible] owners will shoot at a $2[illegible] and a beautiful [illegible] Derby Trophy.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY
ACT DESPERATE, BROADWAY JIM, GOLDEN FASHION

Hilton Lodge Top Dog at Taunton

By MATTHEW KEANEY

Best bet—HILTON LODGE—in 9th

Taunton, Aug. 13—Derby eve at this dog track [illegible] a well-balanced card of ten races offered by Racing Secretary Jim Hodeck.

For my best bet of the night I am taking Hilton Lodge in the ninth race. This one has been racing in improved form of late, though in hard luck, and should be a handy winner tonight.

AUSTEN LAKE

Tony Lazzeri Lives Down Old World Series Failure

THERE WERE FAINT CHEERS WHEN TONY Lazzeri, the lean and elderly second baseman for the New York Yankees, lifted a home run into the left field screens at Fenway Park during Thursday's initial conflict. But there were terrific yells when Tony whiffed so mightily later on that it required some effort to untwist the corkscrew curl in his legs. A wag near the grandstand piperails carolled, "Does your Mother know you're out, Lazzeri," and Tony cast a baleful glare over his shoulder.

AUSTEN LAKE

It has been many years since we heard that familiar old jibe, which carries back to something Lazzeri failed to do eleven years ago, and reminds us that human nature measures a man not so much by his triumphs as by his little failures. For, despite the many satisfying feats which Lazzeri performed during the twelve years that he has worn the imperial purple of the Yankees, he will always be recalled for something he did not do under spectacular conditions in the 1926 world Series.

That was [illegible] when old Grover Pete Alexander, the dreadful example of his day, strolled very limber-legged into the pitcher's box during the deciding game, hiccupping softly, to replace Jess Haines, who had loaded the bases with Yankees. The score was 3 to 2 in favor of the St. Louis Cardinals, and I seem to remember that Haines had incurred a hangnail or scuffed a callous on his index finger though it might have been bursitis of the wrist. But I don't think it could have been bursitis of the wrist because Haines is still pitching for the Cardinals at the ripe old age of 44, while Pete is heaving in some Texas grocery league for cakes, keep and cigarette money.

* * *

We Go to the Book for Such Things

I AM CERTAIN, HOWEVER, THAT HAINES loaded the bases and then resigned the muddle to old Alex, who had won a victory of his own the day before. You get these figures out of the little record book, where they are jelled in black and white type. Certainly you wouldn't expect anyone to carry such data around in his head. No, you go to the little volume, and if it doesn't print the exact date and circumstances, you just say in a kind of editorial shrug, "Somewhere in that era," or "Along about that time," which is what we call shuffling your footwork to keep clear of the ropes.

Many of our best authors compile clinical data and keep a complete audit of historical fact, which is a smart system if you like bookkeeping. But somehow, for me, the items always get cluttered up with old memorabilia and publicity matter like the stuff sent out by Paul Bowser or Les Stout at the Boston Garden or as trotted around by Mr Haddock Sullivan. Besides you could search a whole afternoon to learn whether an incident occurred on Jan. 18, 1922, or six weeks later, and never find it. And suppose you did, what then?

* * *

Lefty Grove's Memory

ONCE I HAD TO WRITE A LIFE'S STORY about Lefty Grove and shagged down to Lanaconing, Md., for some information and, though he wished to divulge the required data, the best he could do was some vague guessing, so that practically the entire 40,000 words were written out of other books and bales of newspaper clippings found right in the library of my home journal. So, I don't mind letting you know that we go to the reference room for these living, breathing manuscripts.

Lazzeri was the next batter, when Haines loaded the sacks at this particular stage of the 1926 World Series in the Yankee Stadium and Rogers Hornsby [illegible] up his glove and waggled it toward the outfield bullpen where Old Alex was snoozing in the sun, never imagining that he would get another call, particularly in view of his shinnanigan the evening before.

Another heaver leaped off his chair and, indicating himself with his thumb, yelled, "Me?" And Hornsby shooed him back with a contemptuous gesture, "Not you. Him!"

To which the other pitcher, aghast, yelled back, "What, him? After last night?"

"Yes. Him," Hornsby wigwagged "Get the bum up off his back and start him walking."

So they propped Old Alex up on his feet and pointed him toward the pitcher's box giving him a little starting shove. And there he went putting one foot down carefully before the other and meandering this way and that with a big [illegible] quake so that he was like to shiver off his red and [illegible]. And he stood out on the mound squinting through the mist and lobbing up a few practice throws.

And he struck Lazzeri out.

Pioneer For the Roman Element

SO, THE NEXT WINTER WHEN THE BALL authors held their annual frolic, gargle and chew at the Waldorf Astoria, a quartette sang a whimsical little song which started, "Does your mother know you're out, Lazzeri?", which became a kind of derisive rallying cry for years afterward

Tony was one of the first Italian players to make the major league grade and blaze the trail for the increasing rush of Italo-Americans, like Oscar Mellilo, Francesco Crosetti, Guiseppi DiMaggio, and Dominic Dallesandro, all of whom have played a vital part in this multi-millionaire's series between the beer-built Yankees and the mines, mills and lumber made Red Sox. It will warm the cockles of the people who live along Hanover street to know what a revival the Italian element are having in baseball, after the collapse of their pugilistic compatriot, Primo Carnera, in one of the most pathetic bust-ups in the annals of fistiana.

OUIMET PLANS AIR TRIP WEST

Other Local Stars Going With Him

By BILL GRIMES

Some of the best four-ball combinations in these parts are scheduled to appear during the two-day Hatherly Country Club invitation, which broke away from the barrier this morning.

Dick Lincoln, the club professional, reports that Hatherly is in remarkably fine condition and that judging from the calibre of the teams, which have reserved starting times, the scoring will be very low.

Hatherly Country Club [illegible] is a summer course and for many years attracted unusually large fields. In fact, until this year when Marshfield eclipsed the mark, Hatherly held the record for entries in an open tournament.

Francis Ouimet, Jesse P. Guilford and Allan L. Ellis will start for Portland, Ore., by plane, next Thursday. They will be accompanied by Johnny Fischer, Eddie Lowery, Bill Danforth and Linde Fowler. They are due to arrive in Portland Friday morning.

The clubs which stage three day [illegible] ball match play tournaments and figure their system is a copy of that used by Eugene "Skip" Wogan at the Essex County Club are laboring under a misapprehension. The Wogan system is so complicated that with the exception of Freddie and Johnny Corcoran there isn't anyone in the golf game capable of operating a Wogan board.

And, while on "Skip" Wogan, I recall that his son Philip is a sophomore—come September at the University of South Carolina.

Johnny Kosowski, Manchester-by-the-Sea, has taken out a junior membership at Sandy Burr and has entered the state junior championship. He has only played in one state junior championship, 1935 at Cohasset, where he failed to qualify. He qualified in the Hearst in 1935 and 1936 and he's a real threat for state junior honors. Johnny will enter Governor Dummer Academy this fall and he'll be heard from in football, basketball and baseball. He's headed for Yale.

Belmont Country Club is primed for the annual Massachusetts junior championship which starts next Tuesday with an 18 hole qualifying round. Stan Tay[illegible] who won the junior crown a year ago at Lincoln will be hard to defend his title against the fastest field ever to compete in the championship. The age limit has been extended to the 21st birthday.

John T. Jameson [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] in golf tournaments [illegible] great play [illegible] few tourneys he's bound to catch the old bug, and the [illegible] knows he'll be out trying to hit that little white agate.

Francis Ouimet entered the Essex four-ball invitation to get some competition before playing in the national amateur championship at Portland, Ore.

Shirley Hanover Trot Winner

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 13 (US)—Shirley Hanover, a bay daughter of Peter Volo and Hanover's Bertha, ran away with the 11th renewal of the $40,000 Hambletonian trotting stakes at Good Time Park.

Unheralded and unrated, the filly which runs for L. B. Sheppard's Hanover farm, captured two straight heats with astounding ease as 15,000 stunned form followers looked on.

Shirley Hanover, rewarded for her unexpected triumph by $37,912, is the first get of a former winner to take the rich prize—Hanover's Bertha won the Hambletonian of 1930.

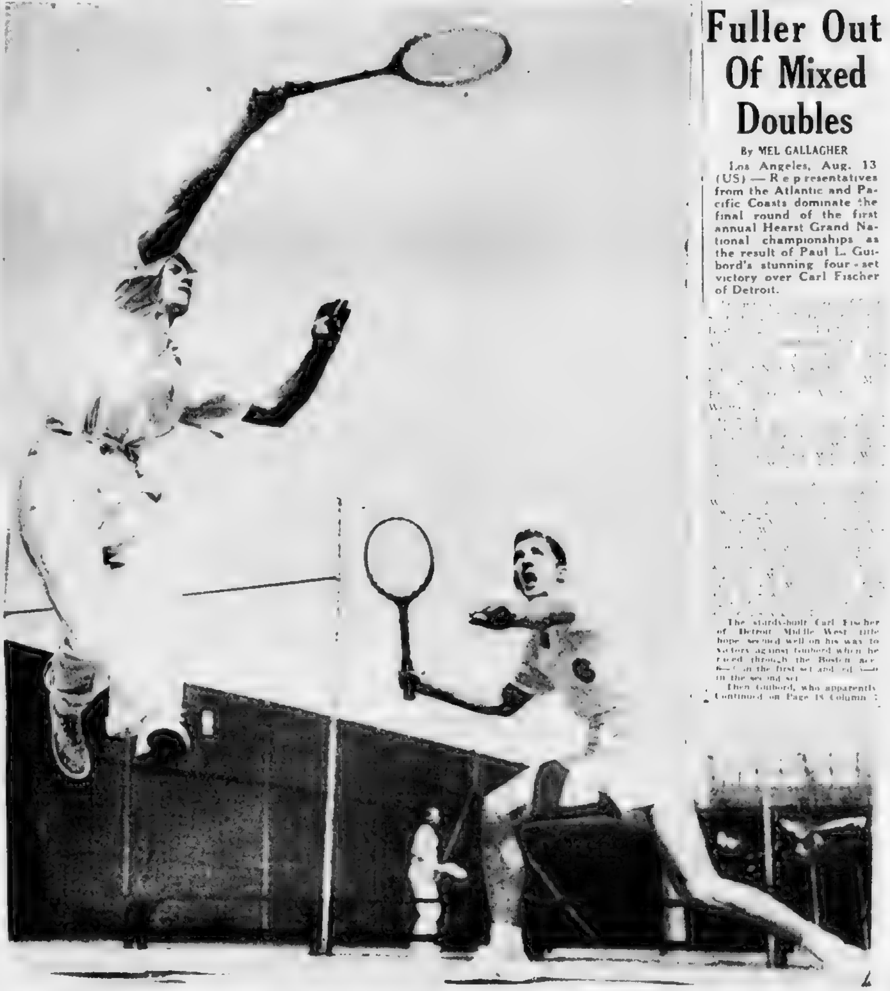
Shirley Hanover's victory was a crushing blow to the bettors who had made Paul Bowser's DeSota an almost prohibitive choice. On form DeSota figured to win but past form, obviously, was no barometer.

DeSota ran a dismal fourth in the opening heat and finished an equally disappointing second in the final mile canter.

On the basis of their showings in the two heats, DeSota and E. Roland Harriman's Farr, a 25 to 1 shot, finished tied for second and third money.

Farr was second to the surprisingly fleet Shirley Hanover in the first heat, and fourth in the second.

Boston Boys Go Down After Great Fight



ED FULLER

PAUL GUIBORD

Boston's great doubles team, Ed Fuller and Paul Guibord, met defeat in the first round of the Hearst Grand National tennis championships in Los Angeles to one of the best doubles team in the country. The Eastern champions forced the victors to five sets before succumbing. Here's Ed Fuller going up in the air from a great return and Paul Guibord right on the job. But Guibord is still going strong in the singles. He ousted Carl Fischer, Detroit ace, and will play in the finals tomorrow. Today he is pairing with Fuller in the consolation doubles. Guibord is a Melrose High and Dartmouth product.

Bill Farnsworth Gets New Post

NEWS FROM New York that Mike Jacobs has announced the appointment of W. S. (Bill) Farnsworth as vice-president of the Twentieth Century Club . . . Bill for seven years was sporting editor of the New York Journal and before that was in charge of the sports desk of the New York American . . . Farnsworth has been writing "Sidewalks of New York," one of the top columns in New York . . . As vice-president of the Twentieth Century Club Farnsworth will direct the boxing programs which will be staged in the New York Garden and in the various outdoor arenas . . . The Twentieth Century Club recently took over control of boxing at the Garden under a rental and profit-sharing arrangement.

Bill is well qualified for his new post, as he was the moving spirit in the huge Milk Fund boxing promotions which have raised $1,250,000 for the poor of New York city . . . The two Sharkey-Schmeling bouts were among these promotions . . . The first Sharkey-Schmeling tussle netted the Milk Fund $178,000, which is the largest sum it ever received from a single promotion.

Farnsworth was born in Worcester and got his early newspaper training in that city . . . He later joined the sports department of this newspaper and wrote baseball and other sports . . . From Boston, Bill went to the Hearst Georgian-American as sports editor, and then bowed into New York with the New York American . . . Bill has made many trips to Boston and New England to greet old friends and attend major sports classics . . . He was at Suffolk Downs when Bill Farnsworth, Mrs. Marion Cassidy's stake horse who is named after him, won . . . Bill knows as many important people along Broadway as any person in the big town . . . He has oceans of personality, and a world of ability . . . He'll make a great success of his new job.

Bill will give the Twentieth Century Club the personality touch it has needed . . . Mike Jacobs will continue to handle the financial affairs of the club, while Farnsworth will close the big matches and turn on the steam for the ballyhoo . . . When Tex Rickard was the greatest promoter in the world, he never made an announcement of a big show without first discussing the matter with Farnsworth . . . It was natural that Bill should be on friendly terms with Mike Jacobs, Rickard's old pal . . . The new combination will help sports . . . Congratulations, Bill . . . We're all rooting for you to continue making good.

COLLINS' Loss Hurts CUBS

GIANTS HIT HARDEST

By WARREN BROWN

Chicago, Aug. 13 (US)—We're going to have to put the 1937 baseball season down as the one in which accidents in play came very close to overshadowing the game itself.

Neither American or National League was spared. The latest mishap, the fracture of Rip Collins' ankle, merely adding to the alarming total.

The football season, which is showing signs of getting an early start, will have to go some to keep up with the baseball year in readying up cases for the hospitals.

Without attempting to list the injuries in their chronological order we might make a start as far back as Spring training.

TEX IN CAST

Tex Carleton, one of the Cubs' most effective pitchers, hurt his arm and had to wear it in a cast for a while. [illegible] Tex and the Cubs, the arm came back in good shape.

About the time Carleton was getting his arm, Hank Leiber of the Giants was hit on the head with a pitched ball. He has been of little value to the Giants since then.

Most serious of all the accidents was the "beaning" of Mickey Cochrane, Detroit Tiger manager, in a game with the New York Yankees.

Cochrane has returned to uniform and is again managing his club, but his playing days in all probability are over.

Cochrane's injury was the climax of a series of mishaps that threw the Detroit club completely out of stride, when it was regarded in the spring as the chief threat to the Yankees.

Mickey was one of the few playing managers left, and his departure from the firing line hurt his club as much as the inability of Jimmy Dykes, White Sox manager, to fill in at third base hurt the White Sox chances.

The Yankees, for all of their power, lost a very fine ball player for a great stretch of the season when George Selkirk crashed and fractured a shoulder.

GIANTS HIT HARD

The Giants, besides losing Leiber, found their great catcher Gus Mancuso and their shortstop Dick Bartell both rendered null and void because of accidents right at a time when the Giants needed them most.

Pittsburgh, in a game against the Cubs, lost the services of Arky Vaughan with a knee injury.

Inasmuch as Vaughan has been one of the National League's sturdiest hitters his loss to the Pirates has been a great one.

The Brooklyn club, none too well fortified in the pitching department, had to lose the services of their star, Van Mungo, because of his need for an operation.

HAZARDOUS OCCUPATION

Even the great "Dizzy" Dean did not escape injury, though he chose the all-star game as the scene of his disaster, a line drive that cracked against his toe.

At the outset of the season the Cubs were visited with all sorts of injuries and ailments and came to [illegible] that season with a [illegible] up [illegible].

At the time [illegible] was hurt, Bill Lee, a great pitcher, was not in uniform, having [illegible] some muscles in his side, and Billy Jurges was also out of action because of a shoulder injured in sliding to the plate.

Up and down both major leagues it has been well nigh impossible this season for any club to put its full war strength on the field for any length of time.

And even the umpires were not immune, for Dolly Stark, one of the best, was banged with a foul tip in a Cub-Cardinal game and had to be aided from the field.

Baseball this year is definitely a hazardous occupation.

$2500 HANDICAP MONDAY

By TRACKMAN

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 13—Walter E. O'Hara's Narragansett Park is ready for the most auspicious opening in its history, with 500 thoroughbreds already on the grounds, and another thousand head due to arrive before the opening day, Monday.

A record meeting is in prospect, and the jockey colony is growing by leaps and bounds. Such topnotch members of the nation's riding brigade as George Woolfe and Charlie Stevenson are already on the grounds.

Opening feature of the meeting will be the renewal of the $2,500 [illegible]

Taxation Views of Long

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, Aug. 13—It is unsafe for government to absorb in public expenditures more than one-fifth of the anual income of the country, according to a statement made to me by Henry F. Long, commissioner of corporations and taxation in Massachusetts and former president of the National Tax Association.

Queried as to the reasonable limits of taxation, Mr. Long told me:

"The reasonable limits to which taxation can go in the United States are to be determined by the establishment of a reasonable sum to remain in the hands of individuals as capital in order that through the exercise of their talents there can be developed an annual accretion, a portion of which can be used in the form of taxes and the balance retained by the individual.

"It would seem clear that not more than 20 per cent of the annual income of the country should be devoted to the current costs of government and not more than 20 per cent should at any time be expressed in capital outlays by the government.

"Taxation is much misunderstood because it is normally considered only in terms of tax bills and tax payments when in fact it is the term used for capital or income taken by government for current needs and capital outlays which if taken either directly or indirectly to too great an extent from talented individuals will prevent their continued productiveness, and if taken to too great an extent from capital will destroy industry.

"Well-controlled governmental functions will require but few of the dollars from the individual's pockets and by leaving as many dollars as possible in the individual's pockets government will thrive.

"The reasonable limits of taxation in the United States should be determined by a constant effort to leave as many dollars in the individual's pockets for his own expenditures as can be done after government has supplied for the benefit of the individual those things which the individual by ordinary initiative cannot perform for himself."

• • •

Giving the basis for setting up yardsticks of governmental extravagance, Massachusetts' chief tax collector further pointed out:

"It is axiomatic that there is a limit to taxation, but it is difficult to sense when it is reached. The individual taxpayer is likely to feel upon the receipt of any tax bill that it has arrived, but his emotions cannot be relied upon to express an accurate determination.

"It is necessary to have government and it is part of our established institutional system that what it provides shall be furnished to the people through the three strata of activities known as federal, state and municipal. To the extent that a capital outlay by government develops the capacity of the people, it may be approved, but it must be clear that such an outlay is in fact likely to prove of continuing benefit to the people.

"The extent to which government may go in capital outlays is limited just as the individual is limited as to the portion of his savings and annual income which may be dedicated to capital investment. The bulk of governmental expenditure is for current needs, and except to the extent that the expenditure is of definite benefit to the members of society, cannot be regarded as having achieved its objectives."

Special Meeting to Be Adjourned

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Action by shareholders on the proposed merger of Alleghany Corp. and Chesapeake Corp., top units in the former Van Sweringen rail empire, will be postponed, it was indicated today.

Special stockholders' meetings of the two holding concerns, scheduled for August 17, will be adjourned to dates to be decided then, it was announced here at the office of Robert R. Young, chairman of the Alleghany Corp.

STOCKS In Quiet RALLY

AVIATIONS LEAD ADVANCE

New York, Aug. 13—Stocks rallied slowly in today's market after a start that gave no indication of a definite trend. Aviation and specialty issues led the advance but steels and others picked up a following later. Near the fourth hour, gains of fractions to 2 points or more predominated.

The corporation earnings outlook, brokers said, brought in some buyers. At the same time it was thought many traders were disinclined to expand commitments because of confusing congressional developments and the Sino-Japanese war clouds at Shanghai which might envelop other nations.

Bonds and commodities were uneven. A number of secondary rail loans regained popularity.

Although there was little profit selling here and there in the afternoon, stock generally pointing upward included Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, U. S. Rubber, Chrysler, General Motors, Woodworth, Montgomery Ward, Deere, Oliver Farm, Western Union, Electric Power & Light, General Electric, du Pont, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Colorado & Southern, Spiegel Inc., Radio, Crown Cork, Canada Dry and Servel.

ANACONDA NARROW

Narrow were Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, International Nickel, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio, Macy, American Telephone and Consolidated Edison.

Crown Zellerbach, a strong spot the past week, dipped. The company declared an interim dividend, the first since 1930, and it was suggested this might have been discounted.

Capacity operations in some of the aircraft manufacturing plants drew attention to this department. Steels reflected thoughts of steady improvement in profits for most of the mills.

Indicating a revival of interest in the lethargic capital markets were the announcement that Consolidated Edison would issue $80,000,000 in debentures, expectation of $30,000,000 in new financing by a railroad subsidiary of U. S. Steel and the plan of Pierce-Arrow to sell $10,700,000 of stock to finance production of a low-priced car.

Rails were watched in view of the belief of some observers heavy goods and crop shipments, improved operating efficiency, an amicable adjustment of the wage controversy and possibility of higher rates will bring better net income figures in future months.

CURRENT ITEMS

While the retail buying pace slowed perceptibly this week due to oppressive heat and intermittent showers, Dun & Bradstreet said, those following merchandising stocks were still hopeful of accelerated distribution this fall.

The commercial service pointed out that some of the leading retail centers failed to equal their turnover of the previous week, but the general average was higher by 1 to 3 per cent.

Recent liveliness of distillery company shares was attributed partly to the fact the industry is facing seasonal expansion with the prospect of profits will continue at a satisfactory level despite the lower trend in whiskey prices.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $4.98 9-16. The French franc was .00⅛ of a cent higher at 3.75⅝ cents.

Carloadings Off 12,954 Cars

Washington, Aug. 13 (INS)—Loading of revenue freight for the week ended August 7 totaled 769,706 cars, a decrease of 12,954 cars below the preceding week but an increase of 41,335 cars above the corresponding week of last year, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

Miscellaneous freight 303,594, decrease 4039, increase 14,471; merchandise less than carload lots 168,369, increase 1552 and 2647; coal 111,504, decrease 7118 and 3020; grain and grain products 46,318, decrease 5314 and 128; livestock 13,537, increase 2249, decrease 1180; forest products 41,144, decrease 1626, increase 5961; ore 75,533, increase 1880 and 21,327; coke 9707, decrease 538, increase 1257.

FALL OUTLOOK IMPROVES

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Improvement of fall prospects rather than acceleration dominated the week's trade, Dun & Bradstreet said today.

"Oppressive heat and intermittent showers interfered with shopping plans in so many districts that some of the leading centers of distribution failed to equal their sales of the week preceding; the general average, however, was richer by 1 to 3 per cent," the survey said.

"Response to August promotions, some of which featured merchandise under replacement values, provided the major contribution to the moderate increase in retail distribution this week.

"Apparel with which to combat the heat was in demand, while knit goods, sportswear and vacation accessories continued to sell well.

"Aftermath of the buying surge during market events of the fortnight preceding resulted in a recession in orders to many wholesale branches.

"Most of the principal centers, however, were well occupied with replacement requests for current promotions and belated orders for merchandise for early September selling."

Remington Plans Additions to Two Plants

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—S. M. Knapp, vice-president of Remington Rand, Inc., announced plans for enlarging manufacturing facilities at two of its plants.

Capacity of the plant at Tonawanda, N. Y., will be increased by approximately 25 per cent through construction of an extension. At the noiseless typewriter plant at Hamilton, Ont., additions will be made involving a 33 per cent increase in floor space.

No information was given as to the cost of the extensions.

The company reported July sales totaled $4,050,000, against $3,285,000 in July, 1936, an increase of 23.2 per cent. For the first four months of the fiscal year, sales amounted to $16,958,000, against $13,308,000 for the same period of the preceding year, a gain of 27.4 per cent.

Promoters Blocked By SEC

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 13 (INS)—The Federal government has thwarted attempts by more than two dozen wildcat gold mining companies to capitalize on the current gold bloom, the SEC revealed today.

According to commision records, stop orders during the past months have blocked issuance of more than $100,000,000 in stocks and bonds by gold mine promoters. These securities were designed for public sale.

With the U. S. treasury paying $35 per ounce, gold production has been stimulated in all parts of the world. Gold mining operations in the United States during 1936 resulted in the output of 4,313,122 ounces, valued at $150,959,270. This was an increase of 703,000 ounces over 1935 and came close to a production record.

Since American gold output is shared by 22 states, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Philippines, the SEC has received an increasing number of registration statements from newly-organized gold mining ventures.

Glib promoters have haunted the commission headquarters seeking approval for large stock and bond issues which would be used to begin mining operations.

Aware that the public is still gullible so far as gold stocks are concerned, the commission has instituted the most exacting investigation of all applications by mining companies.

The commision maintains its own force of geologists and mining engineers to conduct searching tests at the applicant's mine sites. Officials estimate that of all the SEC stop orders against flotation of securities, 60 per cent involved proposed issues of gold mines.

Use of a "doodle-bug," a device consisting of a piece of metal attached to a leather strap, to determine location of gold beneath the ground, was cited by the SEC in a stop order against the La Luz Mining Corp., of Montreal.

This concern sought permission to issue $150,000 of stock to operate a gold mine in Sonora, Mexico. Claims of gold ore deposit made by the company through use of the "doodle-bug" were characterized by the commission as "reprehensible and ludicrous."

"Science and common sense combine to tell us gold cannot be located by use of doodle bugs," the commission warned. "It would be well for the investing and speculating public's pocketbook if this lesson could be thoroughly learned."

Pierce-Arrow Outlines Plan

New York, August 13 (AP)—In a letter to stockholders the Pierce-Arrow Motor Corp. outlined a reorganization plan involving formation of a new corporation and the raising of $10,700,000 new capital.

Stockholders will consider the plan September 2.

Under the plan, new corporation would acquire assets of the present company for new capital stock distributed on the basis of one share for each two shares of present preferred, and one share of new for each five shares of present common.

It is also proposed to offer 1,300,000 shares of new stock for public subscription at $10 a share.

Newsprint Output In Canada High

Montreal, Aug. 13 (INS)—Production of newsprint in Canada during July, 1937, amounted to 314,529 tons and shipments to 301,850 tons, according to the Newsprint Service Bureau. This compares with 301,871 tons and 311,507 tons, respectively, in the previous month.

Canadian mills produced 335,157 tons more in the first seven months of 1937 than in the correspondent period a year ago, an increase of 19 per cent. Stocks of newsprint paper at Canadian mills were reported at 79,993 tons at the end of July.

SEES South Making PAPER

WOULD SAVE U. S. $20 A TON

By B. C. FORBES

Will the South by and by emancipate America from importing newsprint and other paper, prices of which have been jacked up embarrassingly? Today we import more than half of our pulp and paper requirements. Cost, fully $200,000,000. The South figures on producing paper at well under $30 a ton, contrasted with a threatened price of $50 a ton.

Recently a northern newspaper was published on newsprint made in the South, a forerunner of big things to come.

Were you and I asked to name the field in which the South has been making the most momentous strides, doubtless we would reply "cotton manufacturing." We would be wrong.

DOMINATES EXPANSION

"Pulp and paper mill construction," records the blue book of southern progress, "has dominated the industrial expansion of the South in the past 18 months. The rapidity of this development transcends the remarkable growth of the textile industry in the South. Approximately $85,000,000 is being invested in 14 projects to include two proposed newsprint mills. They will add approximately 1,400,000 tons a year to the paper-making capacity of the South, which now supplies a large proportion of the kraft paper and board made in the United States.

"The experimental work of Dr. Charles H. Herty in proving that white paper and newsprint can be made at low cost from Southern pine and the efforts of the Southern Newspaper Association to bring about the erection of a newsprint mill are bearing fruit. Predictions are that many more mills will be established in the not distant future."

The South estimates that it can produce 50,000,000 cords of pulpwood a year. This is more than four times the nation's present consumption for paper-making.

CAN SUPPLY AMERICA

The same authority proudly proclaims:

"The South can build a paper industry to fully supply the paper demand of America and make us forever independent of foreign pulp and paper imports."

Canadian and overseas suppliers of paper, knowing the necessities of America, have been marking up their prices drastically during recent years. This, together with stiffer wage demands by unions and other rising costs, has brought about the demise of a lamentable number of newspapers and the amalgamation of others, thus throwing many breadwinners out of employment.

It will thus be realized how keen a stake the whole nation has in the development of paper production at reasonable cost throughout the South.

Seeing that the South's percentage of total raw cotton consumption throughout the world has been painfully diminishing, the South's virile industrial expansion is infinitely important and encouraging. Here are heartening facts:

BIG CONSTRUCTION COST

Fully $450,000,000 has been invested in constructing and modernizing southern industries in the last 18 months, a showing never before equalled. Investment in new engineering and building operations last year broke all records, at $939,264,000. Nor has there been any letup this year.

Although the south last year contibuted 40 per cent ($4,000,000,000) of the country's total crop values, the aggregate value of its manufactures was enormously larger, over $9,500,000,000.

Among nationally-known concerns that have been expanding operations in the south are U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Swuft & Co., Cudahy Packing, Standard Oil, Gulf Oil, Texas Co., Pure Oil, Pan-American Refining, Atlantic Refining, Continental Can, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Johns Manville, duPont, Union Carbide, International Paper, International Harvester, Marshall Field, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, General Baking.

Hats off to the South!

Canadian Wheat Stocks Lower

Ottawa, Ont., August 13 (Canadian Press)—A crop report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics placed total stocks of wheat in Canada on July 31 at 32,739,852 bushels, the lowest since 1925.

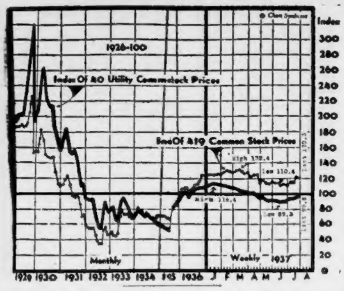
In the later year, 27,713,810 bushels represented the total stocks.

Compared with last year's revised figure of 108,094,277 bushels, this year's carryover shows a reduction of 75,354,425 bushels, the largest carryover of wheat in Canada was 211,740,188 bushels on July 31, 1933, the report said.

Willson Products

Total sales of Willson Products, Inc., for seven months ended July 31, 1937, were $1,001,354 against $816,030 in corresponding period of previous year, an increase of 22.7 per cent.

Utilities Recover



Encouraged by recent political developments in Washington, construed as possibly favorable to utility companies, a group of 40 utility stocks during the week ended July 28, advanced, (on an index basis) two points over the previous week. On the other hand, the composite group of 419 stocks compiled by Standard Statistics, dropped a fraction of a point.

With the exception of the first two weeks in January of this year, utility stocks declined almost continuously up to the middle of June when the first upward trend in prices began.

N. Y. Central Earned $1.01 a Share in Half

New York, August 13 (AP)—The New York Central Railroad Company reported June net loss after fixed charges of $1,174,307, compared with net income in the same month of 1936 of $1,045,726, equal to 21 cents a capital share. Under operating expenses was an item of $2,473,444 on account of the carriers excise tax in conection with the railroad retirement act for the period January 1-June 30, which was charged against June alone.

For the six months ended June 30, net income after fixed charges totaled $6,495,124, or $1.01 a share. This compared with $360,864 or 7 cents a share in the corresponding period last year.

International Hydro-Electric System reported consolidated net profit for the quarter ending June of $480,117, compared with $58,331 in the like period of 1936. The system, a holding unit of International Paper & Power Company, serves electric power, through subsidiaries, to communities throughout New England, New York, Quebec, Ontario and New Brunswick.

South Penn Oil Company, with principal operations in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, reported today net income for the six months ended June 30 of $3,278,744, equal to $3.28 a share, against $1,489,555, or $1.30 a share in the like 1936 period.

Cushman's Sons, Inc., retail bakery chain controlled by Purity Bakeries Corporation, reported net loss for the 28 weeks ended July 17 of $134,634, compared with net loss of $446,720 in the like 1936 period.

Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Co., controlled by the New York Central Railroad Co., reported net income for the six months ended June 30 of $2,200,948, equal to $2.25 a share compared with $1,832,052, or $2.12 a share in the like 1936 period.

Seek Approvals for Brown Plan

New York, Aug. 13—Forms for approval of the reorganization plan of Brown Company, large New England pulp and alpha cellulose manufacturer, have been mailed with copies of the plan to all security holders and general creditors. The mailing went to 6770 bondholders, 2046 preferred stockholders and 1389 general creditors.

A letter enclosed with the plan stated it was not necessary to forward either bonds or stocks in submitting approvals to H. J. Brown, Box 796, Portland, Me. Bondholders who may have deposited their bonds with a committee and who wish to approve the plan are directed to write in the numbers of their deposit certificates on the form of approval.

Brown Company filed its reorganization plan in Federal District Court at Portland, Me., on Monday.

WOOL Goods Marts SLOW

LITTLE DEMAND FOR MEN'S WEAR

New York, Aug. 13—Trading in wool markets this week was desultory, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Demand for men's wear was light, and some slackening in the rate of machinery activity was noted as contracts for fall started to expire.

It is quite possible that a number of men's wear mills will curtail production in the next few weeks, as the clothing manufacturing trade appears to be well supplied with merchandise, and the outlook for a sharp upturn in business in the near future is not bright.

Further improvement in men's wear will depend to a great extent on clothing sales over the next few months. In the women's wear division, business during the week was slow. The lull, however, is not expected to last, and buying should resume once cloak and suit manufacturers readjust prices in conformance with higher manufacturing costs and obtain more information as to probable sales of finished garments during the fall and winter season.

BELOW EXPECTATIONS

"Business to date on tropical worsteds has not come up to expectations," says the Exchange Service. "Specialists in the summer clothing field have laid down initial commitments, but the rank and file of the trade are not expected to place orders until they have finished the manufacture of fall and winter garments. Some duplicate business on fall suitings was written during the week, and some orders were booked on overcoatings and ski suitings.

"Backlogs on men's wear have been diminishing, with the result that manufacturing operations over the next six or eight weeks are likely to show a decline. Spot business during the week was slow. Prices, however, remained strong, as wool and yarn values are being strongly maintained and manufacturing costs continue to rise.

"Demand for women's wear was smaller than in some weeks, due to the fact that buyers have covered their initial requirements and are awaiting orders from retailers for coats and suits before placing duplicate commitments. Mills have moved into a strong position, and a number have enough business on their books to carry them for six to eight weeks. Worsted mills have written fairly sizable orders on boucles and other dressy coatings and have also done considerable business in lightweight dress goods. The outlook for dress goods is bright, commitments to date running well ahead of a year ago.

"Knitters will open lines of swim suits shortly and expect heavy initial business in view of the fact that stocks all along the line are light. Blankets are selling in fair volume, and mills are still busy on old contracts. Knitted outerwear mills find business slow and are curtailing production sharply."

G. M. Overseas Sales Set Record

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—General Motors Corp. reported overseas car and truck sales for the first seven months of 219,162 units, a record high and an increase of 10.2 per cent over the like 1936 period.

Overseas sales in July were 31,341 units, up 23 per cent over that month last year.

THE 400 MILLIONTH

Arthur Penney, superintendent of the Moxie plant in Heath street, Roxbury, is handing Frank Archer the 400,000,000th bottle of Moxie produced by the company. Thirsty folk all over the world have already drunk enough Moxie to float an ocean liner, Moxie statisticians tell us. And if those 400,000,000 bottles were placed end to end, they'd reach three times around the world. No wonder Moxieland is celebrating.

Steel Employment, Payrolls Cut by Strikes

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—June employment and payrolls in the steel industry declined sharply from May levels as a result of strikes prevailing for a large part of the month in four major companies, it was reported today by the American Iron & Steel Institute.

Employes in June averaged 556,000 compared with 595,000 in May, and June payrolls totaled $87,520,000 against $92,931,000 in May. The June figures, however, were still above June a year ago, which showed employment of 498,000 and payrolls of $62,991,000.

Average hourly earnings in June were 87.7 cents, compared with 86.6 in May and 66.9 a year ago.

Eastern Pipe Line Deliveries Up

Deliveries by the nine Eastern pipe lines formerly in the Standard Oil group totaled 9,733,000 barrels of oil in July, or a daily average of 314,000 barrels. This compares with 8,743,000 barrels in July, 1936, or a daily average of 282,000 barrels.

For the first seven months of this year these lines carried a total of 66,069,000 barrels, an increase of more than 18 per cent over the first seven months of 1936. Buckeye Pipe Line Co., Southern Pipe Line Co., National Transit Co., and Northern Pipe Line Co., all showed substantial gains for both July and the seven-month periods.

Dividend

Ludlow Manufacturing Associates declared a dividend of $2 a share, payable September 1 to stock of record August 14.

Offer Many Prizes in Greater Boston Hi-Li Tourney

Swing it, folks, swing that Hi-Li paddle.

The game has taken the country by storm and Boson is rapidly becoming one of the most active centers of the new game.

You play Hi-Li with a small racquet—about the size of those used in Ping Pong. Attached to the paddle by a strong elastic cord is a small rubber ball.

The object of the game is to hit the ball and then keep on hitting it on the rebound as long as you are able.

Sponsoring the sport, the Boston Evening American in co-operation with a group of theaters in the Greater Boston area is offering a number of prizes of all sorts to winners in an elimination Hi-Li contest. All entrants get a free candy bar at contest theaters.

Go to your neighborhood theater right away and join this fascinating contest. Today's contests will be held at:

9:30 a. m.—Strand Theater, Chelsea.

10:30 a. m.—Revere Theater, Revere.

11:30 a. m.—Lincoln Theater, Quincy Point.

MONDAY'S CONTESTS

Monday's contests will be staged at:

9:30 a. m.—National theater, Boston, and Ideal Theater, Roxbury.

10:30 a. m.—Broadway Theater, South Boston, and Strand Theater, South Boston.

11:30 a. m.—Dorchester Theater, Dorchester, and Gem Theater, East Boston.

Globe-Wernicke

Globe-Wernicke Co. declared a dividend of 30 cents on the common, payable September 15 to stock of record August 31.

PROVING TWO CAN PLAY HI-LI

So you didn't believe two could play Hi-Li? Proving you wrong are Patricia and Jean Sawyes, brand new Hi-Li addicts. But when Jean lets go that tethered ball, odds are even whether it'll hit Patricia's racket or Patricia's pretty nose. Only way to learn to enjoy Hi-Li with dignity is to start practicing as soon as possible. Already in progress are preliminary contests in Greater Boston theaters. Valuable prizes, offered by theater managements and the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser go to winners.

MOXIE PLANT SETS NOTABLE MARK

HOLDS PRODUCTION FETE

Before a group of New England business leaders Arthur Penney, superintendent of the Moxie plant, Heath street, Roxbury, tied a blue ribbon on the four hundred millionth bottle of Moxie.

With this act he signalized the passing of another milestone in the 50-odd years in which the Moxie Company has been producing its beverage.

In that period, enough Moxie has been sold, according to officials of the company, to float the largest ocean liners, while the 400 million bottles, placed end to end, would reach nearly three times around the world.

The company is one of the concerns which has made New England products famous for quality throughout the nation, noted guests at the ceremony declared. Among them were Melville D. Liming, representing the chamber of commerce, and Dudley Harmon, vice-president of the New England council.

Frank M. Archer, chairman of the directors, who received the guests with F. E. Thompson, company president, said:

"This event is particularly timely for had he lived my father would have reached his 75th birthday today. Our record is directly the result of his long years of untiring efforts.

"Under his direction for Moxie there was but one standard—100 per cent clean, pure, healthful. And knowing that Moxie actually met this standard, he went to the great buying public, through the press and the radio, stating nothing but the facts. Moxie will continue to measure up to the standard of excellence so firmly established by him."

Commodity Price Level at 87.4 P. C.

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—The Labor Department reported today that wholesale commodity prices corresponding week last year.

The price level at the end of the week, the department said, was 87.4 per cent of its 1926 average, compared with 87.5 per cent the previous week and 81.1 per cent the corresponding week last year.

Farm products dropped from 87.7 to 86.9, while foods fell from 86.5 to 86.3.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, By King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved. Distributed by Universal Service.)

Hollywood, California, is not only the most highly publicized place on the face of the earth today, but the most highly publicized place in all history.

Hollywood far outranks Washington, London, New York City, or any other spot as a date-line in the daily newspapers, take it from day to day year to year.

Damon Runyon

We are willing to wager that if you select at random a batch of 20 of our public prints from the rack of the papers-from-all-over-the-United States man, you will not find one that does not mention the name of Hollywood at least twice. Make the batch 50, and the wager still goes.

The value of the publicity received by Hollywood, if it had to be paid for at ordinary advertising rates, would run into hundreds of millions of dollars annually. Most of it is what any press agent would deem "good" publicity, too.

Scores of newspapers and news syndicates maintain regular correspondents in Hollywood nowadays. It is a rare newspaper, indeed, that does not have its daily, or weekly, column from Hollywood. There are any number of magazines devoted entirely to Hollywood.

INDUSTRY VITAL

It is probably a fair guess that 100,000,000 persons read the name of Hollywood every day, or hear it on the air, for the radio is also contributing to Hollywood publicity.

This prodigious mass of publicity, never before equalled, reflects, of course, the importance of the moving picture industry, and the interest of the public in the people thereof, especially the actors, and actresses. Double especially the latter.

We fear that the general charm of Hollywood, great though it may be, would scarcely provoke any considerable part of this publicity but for the motion picture industry.

As a matter of fact, we are informed that Hollywood is enjoying much of this publicity under what you might call false pretenses. We are told that more motion picture studios are actually located outside Hollywood than are located in it.

NAMES SYNONYMOUS

But as far as the general public is concerned, that is the same as saying that Bacon wrote Shakesphere. Maybe he did, but as far as the general public is concerned, they still are paying off on Shakespeare.

The general public thinks of the movies in terms of Hollywood, and while we do not wish to be a party to the purloining of any publicity that properly belongs to some other spot, we do not see how we can alter this situation.

Our own knowledge of Hollywood, geographically, and otherwise, is somewhat vague. We were there but once, and then only for a short time, and our memory of it is chiefly as a place of extraordinarily nice folks, and extraordinarily poor food. Maybe they have improved on the food since then.

In any event, we distinctly remember that we liked downtown Los Angeles much better. Downtown Los Angeles is lively, and colorful, and picturesque, and is probably the most typically American city in the Union.

We did not meet any of the celebrities of the motion picture industry, except casually, and we are glad of it now. We still preserve all our illusions about them that makes us a distinct set-up for the Hollywood publicity, especially the movie columns in the newspapers.

We read them all, and believe practically everything we read. We love the pictures of the home life of the stars, showing them with their swimming pools, and their dogs, and we rejoice that this home life is never represented as anything other than utterly seraphic, as all home life should be.

It is to be regretted that home life everywhere is not as serene and genteel as it is among the movie stars.

Hen Adopts Kittens

Famous British Author Aids Jewish Cause

CLOSELY following Boston's Faneuil Hall mass meeting, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, comes added support for the Jewish cause in the Holy Land.

Wickham Steed, the noted British author and editor, aligns himself with former Prime Minister David Lloyd George, Winston Churchill and other eminent Britons, who consider that Great Britain should CARRY OUT the mandate entrusted to her by the League of Nations.

Mr. Steed, like his distinguished compatriots who have written for this and other Hearst newspapers, sees no justice in the British Royal Commission's scheme to PARTITION Palestine among the Jews, the Arabs and the British Empire itself.

Mr. Steed contends that the suggestion of a Jewish homeland was made BY ENGLAND as a part of the strategy to WIN THE WORLD WAR.

He declares the Balfour Declaration "was issued in anticipation of POLITICAL VALUE to be received in exchange."

The value was RECEIVED.

Consequently, the obligation to establish the Jewish national home became for Great Britain an OBLIGATION OF HONOR.

CERTAINLY it is something less than a meeting of this obligation WITH HONOR for Great Britain to propose the partition plan with, as Mr. Steed says, "drastic curtailment of WARRANTED JEWISH HOPES."

Declaring that England was the author of the Balfour Declaration and accepted the League mandate for Palestine and the responsibility for giving the Jewish people a homeland, Mr. Steed says the British Government "is hardly entitled to plead the extreme complexity and difficulty of her task as a justification for relinquishing the greater part of it."

He accuses British authorities of treating "one of the deepest and broadest problems of civilization as though it were a local hornets' nest."

What Mr. Steed seems to infer is that England made a bargain with the Jewish people, and IS NOT LIVING UP TO IT.

MR. STEED raises another point that profoundly concerns the Jews of the world when he suggests that a factor in the situation is ANTI-SEMITISM.

"Anti-Semitism," he writes, "endemic in some regions, ARTIFICIALLY FOSTERED in others, is a factor that cannot be overlooked."

The Zionist Congress in Zurich was given startling proof of the truth of this statement, with evidence of the current practice of Jewish persecution by the Communist Government in Russia.

The Executive Committee of the Congress submitted a report charging the Soviet Government with attempting to crush Zionism "by inflicting imprisonment, exile and harrowing suffering upon hundreds of innocent Jews."

Persecution of Jews in Russia, according to the Committee, has made it "increasingly difficult to keep the Zionist movement in Russia alive as a national organization."

JEWS who live in America, on a basis of political, social and religious equality with all creeds, find confirmation in this report of a fact WELL KNOWN TO THEM—that America has given the Jewish people the only TRUE HAVEN OF FREEDOM their persecuted race has ever known.

A homeland in Palestine would be such a haven, besides providing JEWISH NATIONALITY for Jews who want to become a nation again.

Great Britain's threat to abandon the mandate, and to partition Palestine, would represent the COMPLETE FRUSTRATION of an ideal cherished by millions of Jews for 2000 years.

The Governor Is Right

MASSACHUSETTS people generally will concur with the views of Governor Hurley, as expressed in his letter to Senator Walsh.

Rightly, the Governor condemns the inexcusable delay that has attended efforts to obtain adequate flood control legislation for New England.

He points out that the States had the assistance of Army engineers in drawing up their plans for storage reservoirs.

He adds that every agreement was assumed to be satisfactory until the Federal Power Commission voiced its objection.

And he strongly hints that the national administration's dictatorial demands will put an end to New England's hopes that future flood disasters may be avoided.

The Governor is absolutely right. The time for the Federal Government to have recorded its opposition was when the legislatures of the participating States were in session.

Today, with three of the legislatures adjourned, the opposition appears too much like an attempt to force the Federal Government's will upon the States.

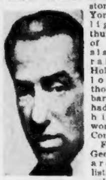
Mr. Hurley might also have said that the money New England seeks is actually New England's own money. This section has contributed millions to every flood and drouth program for the South, the West and Middle West.

Now, apparently, when New England tries to get a comparatively small grant for herself, the terms are so exorbitant that they amount almost to a refusal.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 13—Thoughts while strolling: Those sudden summer Hounds of Baskerville storms in New York — forked lightning, thunder, gusts of wind and slashes of rain. Milton Holden always looks as though the barber shop had just given him the works. So does Conde Nast.



O. O. McIntyre

Fibber McGee and Molly are worth listening to if only to hear Molly say, "Good night all!" Bing Crosby is becoming the No. 1 ad libber. No more temperamental box office draws like Eva Tanguay any more. Or picturesque looking showmen like Morris Gest.

Broadway's giggliest night out threesome: Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner and Eddie Dowling. Shyest of the cafe owners: Sherman Billingsley. A building with six accordion schools. Those movies with cardboard icebergs out front. And girls in the ticket cages fanning madly.

Famous walks: George M. Cohan's, Hope Williams', Eddie Foy, Jr.'s and Charlie Chaplin's. Lee Olwell is no longer one of the town's thin men. Helen Menken and her handsome husband, Dr. Smith. Who remembers when pedestrians, to talk, had to step inside hallways to get away from the riveting din?

Grover Whalen is not too busy campaigning to keep all duded up. Even to the fresh lapel flower, morning, afternoon and night.

Floyd Odlum continues the mystery wizard of Wall Street. Perhaps the only financier to wrest a one hundred million dollar fortune out of the depression. He is the most typical small town jasper the financial district has ever seen rise to spectacular heights. Nobody has ever been so successful picking up moribund companies and infusing them with life.

Odlum, who came from a small town in Colorado, has never been seen at a Broadway opening, a night club or other festivities that attract the biggities.

Odlum in many ways is reminiscent of E. H. Harriman in directness. Like Harriman, Odlum hires men he believes know their jobs, then gives them full rein.

There is a familiar story about Harriman that illustrates the point. He employed an expert to examine a certain railroad property on the advisability of buying it.

In time, the expert sent in a 250 page report which a Harriman employe began to read to the boss. After a couple of pages Harriman stopped him and said: "Turn to the last page and see what he says about buying it. This was done. On the final page it was advised to buy. "All right," snapped Harriman. "Buy."

But of all the familiar stories about the great I like the one my grandfather used to tell about the party of awe-struck persons who called on President Jefferson. They expected to find him bowed down by care, furrowed of brow, weighted with the perplexities of the times—and were amazed to come upon him poking a stick at a tadpole and having a circus of a time.

Then there was the time when—as I recall—Gus Karger, the Washington correspondent, dropped in to see President Theodore Roosevelt informally at the White House. He was persona grata and an attendant explained the President was in a certain wing of the house. Karger made his way there and found the Executive trying to balance a feather duster on his chin.

One of Frank O'Malley's Sun stories told of an impromptu call on David Belasco and of accidentally opening the door to the sanctum without announcement. There sat the producer blowing soap bubbles. He had acquired the outfit for a child friend and was trying it out.

Indeed there are few who have not been caught at least once off guard with subsequent blushings. Briggs once thought of doing a series, "When a Feller Feels a Fool."

I have a sinking sensation thinking of my most auspicious role as such. I was attempting one midnight to gallop from the bath down the hall back to my room in a Dayton boarding house clad a la Ghandi in only a towel.

In my confusion I opened the door of the room next to mine, popping in, all merry, bright and dripping, on four young ladies enjoying a spread of Welsh rarebit. I can still hear their shrieks.

Al Jolson is known for his swings to the jaw. His most notable sock was when he knocked out six-foot detective in John Horgan's famous hotel in Cincinnati when the dick was alleged to have made a slurring remark about Jolson's race.

Mrs. Leslie Carter used to wangle headlines on Page One by refusing, when on tour, to take a suite if the management did not have decorations that matched her wardrobe.

And E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe on the road visited church daily.

Anticipation

FAR EAST GENERAL WAR CALL
Nelson Harding

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I say to you—"How much beauty have you in your life?"

You start to make a list. You think of the beautiful things you own . . . the beautiful things you have done.

Elsie Robinson

A ring. A few fine books. A picture. Your new car. That fine tennis racquet. The trip you took to Florida. The music lessons you're going to take this Winter.

Beautiful things you owned or have seen or have done—you name them over.

"There's the beauty I have in my life," you say.

But you're wrong. You may have all these possessions and experiences in your life, yet have no beauty. You have none of these things and yet walk with beauty every hour.

Once I read a verse by Norman Strand which defined beauty. Here it is:

BEAUTY

"Beauty is not in the bush
"Nor in the tree,
"Nor in the sky,
"Nor in the sea,
"But something bound in the blood
"Of me."

There is truth about beauty.

Beauty is not outside us. It is in us. Beauty cannot be bought or taught. It must be lived. Beauty is the one thing which any man may possess to any measure. And which any man may experience in any place, provided he has the understanding of beauty "bound in his blood."

JOY FOR THE SOUL

How much of your life have you spent envying "people who have lovely things?" And yet you can only have as much loveliness as there is within you, yourself.

A picture hangs on the wall. Twelve men see that picture. Eleven can see nothing in it. A few lines scrolled on white paper. But to the 12th man that picture is a revelation of pure beauty.

Seeing it, he is lifted out of his tired body—and his shabby coat. He is carried away from pain and shame and worry. And once again he sees the salt tides rolling in over the pale marshes in the wide, still light of dawn . . . and hears the plover's skirling cry . . . and smells the sour richness of the wild, black soil.

Eleven men see nothing. Feel nothing but a scrap of paper and a few scrolled lines. They would still see nothing, feel nothing but a little foolish pride even if they were told that picture was worth $2500 and they could buy it and hang it in their rooms.

But the twelfth man, shabby, harassed, half-fed finds wonder and ecstasy and release in that picture. He, alone, really OWNS it and makes it part of his life.

ALL MAY FIND IT

You can have beauty. You can have all the beauty you want. And nothing can ever take it from you. It will stand by you through all loss and distress. It will comfort you even by the grave.

BUT YOU ARE THE ONLY ONE THAT CAN FIND THAT BEAUTY FOR YOURSELF. AND YOU CAN FIND IT ONLY THROUGH THE GROWTH OF YOUR OWN SPIRIT.

Begin to look for beauty. It is all around you. It is waiting in the commonest objects, the simplest experiences.

In the frail network of steel construction flung against an evening sky.

In the afternoon sunlight, spilling through your kitchen window, lying on a pool on your freshly scrubbed floor—

In the heave and sway of a man driving a plough through crumpling furrows of red sod—

In the lift and fall of a woman's arms as she hangs out clothes—

In all these simple sights beauty waits. It is yours, IF YOU CAN FIND IT.

Isn't It So?

A half-baked love affair has no more allure for a woman of brains and good taste than a half-cooked dinner has for an epicure.

When the gods want to make a perfectly devoted and contented wife of a woman, they first extract her sense of humor and then anaesthetize her vanity.

Marry —Go— Round

By Helen Rowland

PASSING TABASCO

The trouble with a lot of our young married couples, like the trouble with most of our whiskies, is that they are too "green," and never get a chance to mellow before they are "distributed."

A sense of humor will do more to steer a girl safely through a counterfeit summer romance, than a sense of propriety. An incredulous laugh will put an over-confident go-getter in his place more quickly than a frozen frown.

Some homes seem to get smaller and smaller, to the point of suffocation, after marriage. Oh, no, the houses don't shrink—it's just that the arguments take up so much more room.

The greatest gamblers in the world are supposed to be men, but how about the women who have had two or three poor deals in the matrimonial game, and still call for another—with the luck running against them?

"Many an underpaid employe, expecting a raise in salary, has come out of the office with a smile on his face—without the raise, but with the title of 'Vice President,'" says a magazine article. Well why not? You can get a combination cook-valet-housekeeper-and-nurse for the price of an inexpensive wedding ring, if you call her "The Missus." It's the prestige of the thing!

Changing girls is about as exciting to a case-hardened philanderer as changing his collar—and far less thrilling than changing his golf sticks. He merely goes through the same old emotions from the first glance to the last sigh—like an actor playing the same role for the hundredth time.

It may sound paradoxical, but nothing chills a man's love so quickly as a woman's attempt to keep it at a permanently high temperature.

Tales of the Jungle

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

There's an H. Rider Haggard story in that tale from Panama of three prospectors finding the Conquistadores' cache of gold bullion, stamped with the Spanish crown seal; the mysterious shooting of one of the fortune hunters, and the ghostly yarn of Spanish conquerors' bones in the old mine shaft.

Edwin C. Hill

All the stock properties of romance, to be sure. But to all who know the jungle it is a miasmic breath from another age—Pizarro, Cortez and Balboa walking again in a troubled dream of loot and cruelty and passion.

Tales like that drip from the Bongo trees in those deep jungle caverns. Ride through the Panama Canal in cool white ducks, sipping a cool drink under a deck awning. The waterway is bordered on each side by a smooth greensward which would do for a putting green. Poised beyond and above it is the dark, ominous jungle, seeming to crouch, ready to spring.

One understands, with something like apprehension, that this little gash in this dark immensity is but a feeble repulse of savage gloom and doom. In white mess jacket and cummerbund, the traveler dances to swing music at the Tivoli Hotel, and if the windows are open and the wind right, the band rhythms blend with the slow, unstressed chant of voodoo priests.

Two historic epochs live side by side, and sometimes the news tickers trap them under the same headline.

A WITNESS TALKS

Just the other night I was talking with an old friend—a man who had hunted gold in the Panama wilderness before the canal was built. It was in a little midtown hole-in-the-wall, late at night, where the pounding of the elevated became the distant rumble of jungle drums. My friend has what Broadway would call a "dead-pan" face.

Like John Vandercook and the late Colonel P. H. Fawcett and many others who have known remote and savage places and people, he is curiously evasive about jungle magic. He has memories which bring a baffled, questioning look to his eyes.

"Not so far from Chepigana," he said, "at the entrance of the Gulf of Darien, there is a scar on the hillside believed to be the covered entrance to an old Spanish mine shaft. An obi man, the voodoo medicine man, guards it and at times there are tribal incantations and animal sacrifices that take place there.

"I could not get the story from any of the natives, but finally heard it from Leonardo, a little Jamaican, who had escaped from the virtual French peonage when they were trying to dig the canal, and who had not forgotten his English. The tale had to do with Balboa's soldiers and the Tulia Vieja or the 'Old Tulia.'

"BLOOD RED DEMON"

"A woman had murdered her child. For this the gods turned her body blood red and her feet were turned backward. He who crosses her trail is accursed. Women are made barren. You are warned to run in the same direction as the back-turned tracks, thus to avoid her.

"When Balboa was killed there, his slaves escaped and made a colony up the Rio Darien. A Spanish ship came, with soldiers. They found a mine. They smelted gold bars, waiting for the ship to come and take it away.

"Tulio led the blacks against them. The blacks were repulsed, and Tulio was a fugitive. The soldiers trailed him by his footprints—so they thought. What they really trailed was the dreadful Tulia Vieja.

"The footprints led to their mine. They entered. The blood red demon had come from the mine. They had followed her back-turned tracks. But she suddenly appeared there and brought the roof of the cavern down on their heads. Forty-six of them were buried with their gold. The obi man keeps guard.

"Those who would propitiate the Old Tulia bring offerings. Her cry in the night stirs terror, many a time I have been called out of bed to 'say an oration' to break the spell of the Old Tulia.

A LAND OF MYSTERY

"We got piraguas and went up the tributary Rio Balsa to Tucuti, the country of the spotted people. They have healthy skins but they are spotted like a roan horse, through some kind of endocrin deficiency. Descendants of Balboa's slaves, they have recovered and kept much of their ancient jungle magic.

"Along up the Balsa to a higher tributary called the Coassi, we got a string of colors time and again, panning on the banks of the stream. We had beri-beri, and Chagres fever. The murderous San Blas Indians were lurking in the jungle a few leagues beyond. The natives hinted it would be best not to try to take out any of the gold.

"We saw innumerable gouges, supposed to be old Spanish prospect holes. I knew enough geology to believe they were natural depressions. But I soon found fact and fancy indistinguishable. If you've been down there, you will understand."

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

On what trifles our lives turn! Take a lump of sugar, for instance. Then a kind woman who likes to feed these lumps of sugar to the horses of traffic cops.

You wouldn't think there was a terrible tragedy in those two facts, would you?

Nevertheless, the kindness of Irma Pradier, a hospital domestic of New York City, resulted in her being murdered in an automobile. Her body was discovered on the Harlem speedway, and on her person were found SIX LUMPS OF SUGAR.

The brains in the police department focused on the horses of traffic cops, as Miss Pradier was known to several traffic cops for her kindness to their horses.

The investigation narrowed down to Traffic Cop Arthur H. Chalmers, who, the police say, has confessed to the murder.

A few lumps of sugar and a kind woman—death for her and, maybe, the chair for him. It is such trifles, light as air, that often decide futures.

In the case of Laurence Marks, who is in the toils for killing 8-year-old Paula Magagna, in Brooklyn, he had "A SORT OF UNCONTROLLABLE IMPULSE," according to the statement of the prisoner.

This new plea of murderers that they are subject to an "uncontrollable impulse" is the flimsiest of all defenses.

Civilization and society exist for the sole purpose of defending those who CONTROL their impulses against the depredations of those who do not or cannot control them.

If we all obeyed the impulses that surge up in us each day the world would dissolve into a state of savage anarchy.

As a matter of fact, even among savages there are laws that punish those whose "uncontrollable impulses" endanger the stability of the tribe.

Former Premier Largo Caballero, of Spain, says he cannot approve of the erroneous military policy or the discriminatory social attitude of the present Valencia regime."

This is the same Senor Caballero who, as premier, sent, on last New Year's Day, a long congratulatory telegram to Soviet Boss Stalin, who was then dressed in his best shooting clothes, on the happy understanding between Madrid and Moscow.

Now Senor Caballero, asserting that he is only "a spectator of events" has seen how the Soviet terrorist system is working in Spain.

Naturally, as he may be "called next" before the new Valencia "people's tribunal" and accused of Spanish Trotskyism he is getting somewhat shaky in the knees.

The fundamental trouble with the world today is TOO MANY LAWS.

In every country in the world, with few exceptions, the individual is regimented from the cradle to the grave.

Those "few exceptions," in fact, simmer down to one country—THE UNITED STATES.

Regulatory laws are, however, increasing here at such a rate that we, too, shall soon find ourselves NUMBERED and TICKETED as the people are in European and Asiatic countries.

"Laws are the sovereigns of sovereigns," said Louis the Fourteenth. And Louis knew, for his whole tyrannous regime rested on LAWS AND TAXES.

A law is beneficent when it promotes and guards the liberty of the individual. At the point that law begins its work of reducing the individual to a slave of the state, then it becomes an instrument of evil.

Almost all revolutions have one object—THE REPEAL OF OPPRESSIVE LAWS.

It would astonish most of our lords and masters to find out how completely SELF-GOVERNING and WELL-BEHAVING the average human being is when left alone.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Even a careful motorist must have luck with him to avoid traffic "accidents." In 20 years, Ray Busey, acclaimed "Arizona's Safest Driver," drove 800,000 miles without an accident. A few days ago, another car collided with his machine. Busey escaped injury and police absolved him of any blame.

But his no-accident record was spoiled.

No matter how carefully you may drive, your safety depends to a large extent upon how others drive.

Our national debt seems to go all the time in one direction—UP. Every time it changes, a new peak is established. On August 5 it was $36,814,414,573. There must be a limit to how high it can go.

If the nation is to have any reserve credit with which to meet any emergency that may arise in the near future, the national debt trend must be reversed quickly.

During the World War, the national debt of the United States was increased about 24 billions. We could stand that because the government debt was less than one and one-fourth billions at the end of the fiscal year of 1916.

As soon as the war was over, we began reducing the national debt. By the end of 1930 it was down to little more than 16 billions. In the last seven years, the national debt has been increased more than 20 billions.

But for Coolidge economy and the debt cutting of other administrations, this country's credit couldn't have stood a 20-billion addition to the national debt during the depression.

The most recent increases in the national debt are ascribed to the Treasury's policy of borrowing 50 million dollars a week to maintain its working balance close to the one-billion-dollar level. One of the mysteries of our financial policy is why the Federal government, which has the power to issue new money, at no cost to the taxpayers, makes up its deficits by borrowing money upon which the taxpayers must pay interest.

The fact that more than 40 nations agree with Secretary of State Hull's advocacy of an international policy of self restraining, peaceful negotiation, observance of international agreements, and upholding the principle of the sanctity of treaties is comparatively unimportant so far as the preservation of international peace is concerned.

Germany, Italy and Japan have not expressed their opinions regarding this policy. And they have as much, if not more, to say as anybody else about how long war will be deferred.

When you remember how France and others of our European debtors have repudiated their debt agreements, what they say about the "sanctity of treaties" is of no real consequence. They can be trusted no farther than you can throw an elephant.

Senator Pittsman's proposal that the picketing on the embassies of foreign nations in this country be outlawed seems sensible. It is not merely a case of protecting the lives of foreign representatives.

We shouldn't allow foreign agitators to bring their social and political feuds to the United States.
